EMPLOYEE SERVICE CLUBS is one of a number of studies issued by the Policyholders Service Bureau. It is typical of one phase of a program of service provided for companies that insure their employees under Metropolitan Group policies.

For many years the Metropolitan's health publications and services have been helping its policyholders keep well. With the growth of Group insurance came demands for special information -- first on problems relating to the health and safety of employees, then to other phases of industrial relations and on problems of general management.

The Metropolitan accepted these service opportunities as a matter of good business practice. The health and safety of employees is directly reflected in the company's claim experience. Assistance on other types of business management problems helps safeguard premium income by acquainting Group-insured companies with methods and practices that have resulted in more profitable operation and more stabilized employment in other organizations.

When the information gathered for a particular Group policyholder is believed to be of wide interest, it is put into suitable report form and offered to Group-insured companies generally. The present report is typical. Some other reports that have grown out of investigations made by the specialists who comprise the staff of the Policyholders Service Bureau are:

EMPLOYEE SERVICE REWARDS
MONETARY REWARDS FOR LONG SERVICE
VACATIONS FOR INDUSTRIAL WORKERS
VACATIONS FOR OFFICE WORKERS

So far as supply permits copies of these reports may be had by executives who address the Policyholders Service Bureau on their business stationery. Requests for permission to reproduce in whole or in part, material appearing in these reports should be addressed to this Bureau.

EMPLOYEE SERVICE CLUBS

Employee service clubs have as their basic purpose the promotion of fellowship among their members. They provide a means whereby those employees with long service records develop a mutuality of interest and a measure of personal prestige as a result of continuous, faithful service. Since the sole requirement for membership is length of service, members are drawn from all grades of employees, without reference to job, position, or degree of authority in the organization. Thus, in a spirit of equality and democracy, the service club may become a strong morale factor in promoting friendly relations among the members of the group.

The purpose of this report is to analyze the features of employee service clubs and to provide information on the scope and contents of their bylaws. It is based on material received from a survey of 23 companies in various lines of business whose clubs are believed to have a consistent record of successful operation.

Relationship of the Company to the Club

The company by which club members are employed does not participate in either the organization or the management of the club, as these functions are the sole prerogative of the club members. However, members of management, in their capacity as veteran employees, naturally participate in club activities to the same extent as any other employees. While the company does not influence club policies, it often aids through making available space or facilities for meetings and other similar helps.

Eligibility and Service Requirements

Service requirements for membership in the service clubs included in this survey, range from 5 to 25 years. There is some evidence that the length of service required for membership is often determined by the age of the employing firm. The table below shows an analysis of those companies whose plans were reviewed.

Years Service Requirement	Manufacturers	Non-Manufacturers	Total
25 years	4	6	10
21 years	0	1	1
20 years	5	2	7
10 years	3	1	4
5 or more years until 25 years	0	2	2
Total	12	12	24

In several instances two or more service clubs exist in the same company. A public utility company, whose service activities were inaugurated in 1919, now has the following clubs:

Women's organization

Five-year club

Men's organizations

Five-year club

Ten-year club

Fifteen-year club

Twenty-year club

Senior club

Some background on the genesis of one club is given as follows:

"In the fall of 1942, we formed a Quarter Century Club composed of men and women who had served the company continuously for more than 25 years. When this list was compiled the oldest in point of service was one man who had worked continuously for 68 years. Three of his brothers have served more than 50 years each."

Selecting a Name

Although the use of the word "veteran" in the names of employee service clubs is most popular, various interesting and descriptive names are also found. The following is a fairly representative list:

Quarter Century Club
Twenty-five Year Club
Twenty-Year Club
Ten Year or More Service Club
Five-Year Club
The Veterans' Association
The Pioneer Club
Old Timers' Club
Old Guard
Early Settlers' Organization
Gold Button Club
Senior League
The Stand-By Club
Stick-With-It Club
Athletic and Social Club

Insignia and Rewards

Many clubs have found that insignia add materially to the feeling of prestige of the members. Service buttons or pins of attractive design are popular in this connection. These generally are of silver or bronze and bear some indication of the length of service of the wearer. In the opinion of many company executives, the cost of providing insignia to eligible employees in recognition of their service is more than repaid in terms of cooperation, interest in work, and loyalty to the company.

One company whose employees have two clubs, with eligibility of 10 and 25 years respectively, furnishes a pin, which changes every five years, to members of the former club. A gold enameled pin is given members of the 25-year club. A membership card is also supplied.

One company gives annual checks for $25, the amount being symbolic of the 25-year club. The checks are used as place cards at the annual banquet; and in addition, a box of candy is at each place for the veteran to take home to his family. Another company gives a 17-jewel watch to employees upon their completion of 25 years of service.

Frequency of Meetings

The frequency of service club meetings depends somewhat upon the size of the organization and the location of the members, but, as a rule, there are one or more formal meetings a year. One club holds monthly meetings of officers. In another club the annual meeting, at which dinner and entertainment are provided, is held in the fall of each year. In addition, quarterly meetings are generally held, which mark the occasion for an outing or other informal gathering.

In cases where the service club is the focal point of athletic events, a large number of such activities occur during the year. These, however, are not exclusively service club affairs, although they may enhance the club's prestige.

In companies having employees in several locations, the club members occasionally hold branch meetings. Some companies provide clubroom facilities which enable the service club members to get together informally at times.

The business meeting at which officers are elected takes place either before or after the annual dinner and, in some instances, is part of an annual reunion.

Dues and Funds

Among the 23 companies whose service clubs were reviewed, it was revealed that more than half of them collect no dues; in these the employer provides the annual dinner or luncheons as well as entertainment, and also the service pins, buttons, retirement gifts, and flowers in the event of sickness or death to members or their immediate families.

In one company, in lieu of dues, all service club members who attend the annual banquet are charged $3. The cost of dinner and entertainment in excess of this $3 charge, is paid by the company.

In two other firms no dues are required, but a small amount is collected monthly for financing a flower fund. A summary of our findings follows:

Number of Companies	Amount of Annual Dues
15	No dues
1	$2
2	$1
4	Not mentioned

The financial arrangements of one manufacturing company are calculated to avoid paternalism and, at the same time, to make the club self-supporting without undue hardship. Club revenues are derived as follows:

1. An initiation fee of 50 cents.
2. Dues of $3 per year, payable semiannually.
3. All profit derived from an outside company which has a special concession on vending machines located in the plant for candy and soft drinks.

The funds are used for financing refreshments at dances and other meetings, and for sponsoring athletic events.

Retired employees usually are exempt from paying dues. In some cases where the clubs have reached a self-sustaining basis, a small allowance is paid the officers for time spent on club matters.

Entertainment Programs

Social activities of employees' service clubs consist of dinners, outings, theaters, dances, and other forms of recreation. The principal entertainment centers around the reunions at luncheons or the annual dinners, at which new members and those having quinquennial anniversaries are honored. The "get-together meetings" often take the form of a banquet which is held either in the building of the company or in a hotel. Music and vaudeville performances are usually provided by the company. If the dinner takes place in the middle of the day, motion pictures or theater parties are planned for the evening.

Another type of reunion is a week-end excursion to the country or shore, a picnic or a clambake at which the entire day is given over to entertainment and sports. Among the attractions may be a parade, a boat ride, a banquet, a band concert, and games. At some picnics, contests are arranged and prizes are awarded to winners. Another event on such occasions may be recognition for various things, such as small cash prizes to the veteran with the longest service, the one with the largest family, the one traveling the greatest distance to attend the picnic, and the oldest veteran.

The following is a composite list of the entertainment activities of the service clubs contributing to this survey:

Picnics

In one organization a hobby promotional committee was organized to develop interest in hobbies, particularly on the part of older members. This helped prepare them for the day when they would retire from business.

A service club officer, who feels that his club promotes good-fellowship among employees and provides the kind of entertainment they like, lists the following regular club activities:

1. Several dinner-dances per year at one of the hotels.
2. Other dances (with refreshments) three or four times a year.
3. Clambakes.
4. Sponsoring of athletic events.

The program of another club is outlined as follows:

1. Dances (four or five a year).
2. Picnic (annually).
3. Golf tournaments for men and women (five or six a year).
4. Domino tournaments.
5. Pool tournaments.
6. Table tennis tournaments.
7. Bridge tournaments.
8. Educational activities (Spanish lessons, reading courses, etc.).

Still another organization describes its program as follows:

"The program consists of a dinner, talks by one or two members of management concerning the company's progress and welfare and other items of interest to the membership at large, after which there is a vaudeville entertainment program of approximately one hour's duration. The attendance at service club dinners is approximately two thirds of the eligible members."

Publicity

In most of the plans of the employee service clubs that were studied, publicity of events is promoted through local papers and company magazines. Where no magazines are published, bulletin boards are generally used. In some organizations the company mail delivery serves the purpose. Employee magazine articles are devoted to the announcement of forthcoming meetings, and after the reunions the programs are discussed in detail and the service records of certain members are reviewed. Other activities, such as the presentation of medals or the prize winning contestants, are featured with illustrations.

Considerable publicity is given to the annual service club dinner program of one company. Announcements, several months in advance, are made in the employee magazine. The "dean" of the club and the members of his organization create interest through word-of-mouth publicity. Ten days before the dinner each member receives an announcement and a reply card on which he is requested to indicate whether or not he will attend.

Another club publicizes its regular meetings, annual banquets, and "family picnic" by sending personal invitations to all members and through bulletin-board announcements. Individual photographs which are taken of all members attending parties are framed and then displayed in the recreation building.

In another case each club member is notified about a forthcoming dinner through systematic personal contact. After this annual affair a news item is usually published in the company magazine and in certain local papers.

Another company has an announcement sheet, printed one or more times a week, which is available for service club announcements. These notices include business meetings, the election of officers, and the date of the annual dinner. However, a personal invitation to the dinner is sent to active members through the company mails, while retired veterans receive them through the post office. The reply slips are returned to the secretary of the club, and a few days before the dinner, seat numbers are sent to members who will attend. A recent printed program of this club included the menu, listed the events of the evening, gave a history of the veterans club (which was commemorating its 30th anniversary), included photographs of past and present officers, listed the names of persons on both the main and branch offices committees, and gave the names, salutations, and greetings to the newly eligible employees. An account of the annual banquet was given in the next issue of the employee magazine, and photographs of the speakers were included.

Value

It is the general opinion of the contributors to this survey that there is no better way to promote loyalty, increase the morale of employees, improve the relationship between employees and management, and provide a means of contact with retired employees than through the facilities which the service club affords.

One executive said that management of his company feels that morale is greatly enhanced by this recognition of long service. He said the company's veteran officers consistently attend all club meetings and thereby become better acquainted with the older employees. Thus the fellowship among employees of long service has a beneficial effect on employee relations. Another executive said that the best test of the manner in which the service club is regarded by employees is the fact that approximately 95 percent of the eligible employees are voluntary members.

Organization

Service clubs generally operate under bylaws, approved by the members, which designate the officers and list their responsibilities. Examples are given in the specimen bylaws at the end of this report.

Small Organizations -- The clubs of small companies usually operate as one unit, the club officers directly assuming responsibility for all activities and operations. Ordinarily, there is a close contact between them and the club members, which permits a more personalized operating basis than would be possible in larger units. The qualifications of such officers would be primarily a degree of personal popularity with the membership and an ability to plan and execute successful gatherings.

Large Organizations -- Service clubs of companies operating in several localities generally have club branches. One club, for example, has a separate unit in each of the company's 10 warehouses, and 10 additional club units in the three factories.

Another club has separate officers for the home office club and three principal branches, these units being primarily independent of each other. The home office organization has two committees under the club officers. The first is an executive committee, consisting of a chairman and five members. The second committee, called the fellowship committee, consists of 35 heads of home office club divisions, called "chapter chairmen," and a general chairman. The chapter chairmen are responsible for meetings of their respective membership groups, while the officers and executive committee assume the leadership for general gatherings. Thus, the large membership of this club has a sense of cohesiveness of the entire unit without sacrificing the personalized element of their relationships.
