A veteran of the march made by Merrill's Marauders up Ledo Road into Burma, is visiting his aunt in Poston while on furlough from Torney Central Hosp. June 23, expecting to be reassigned to duty. He went in the army from Honolulu and was assigned to the 298th Inf. from which many members of the famous 100th Bn. were drawn. He was stationed at Scofield Barracks at the time of the Pearl Harbor attack and participated in its defense. He came to the mainland June 5, 1942 with the 100th and training with the Inf. battalion for about six months before being transferred to the Army Intelligence Sch. at Camp Savage. On finishing the course there he volunteered for special combat duty and was assigned to Merrill's Marauders as team leader of interpreters leaving the United States in Sept. 1943. Then followed a period of strenuous duty, highlighted by the now famous march up Ledo Road into Burma and the Battle of Walabum. He was hospitalized and later flown to his unit from hospital. He was hospitalized and later flown to his unit from hospital, entering combat at Myitkynia the next day. He was again hospitalized for days before the collapse of Japanese resistance in that area. On his return to duty two weeks later he was assigned to headquarters of the Northern combat area command, then to Allied supreme Headquarters in South East Asia. When Malaria again laid him low, he was again hospitalized in India and when able to travel, returned to U.S. and sent to Palm Springs.
