Biography/History

Max Tatch (1898-1963) was a mid-twentieth century landscape and architectural photographer. Though he was born in Edinburgh, he resided in Hollywood, California for the majority of his life. Tatch worked as a free-lance black and white photographer in the surrounding Los Angeles area until his death in 1963. Tatch traveled numerous times to Europe, specifically Spain, Portugal and other countries to pursue photography.

Earlier in his life, Tatch introduced his nephew Sid Avery, to photography. Avery later became a successful photographer and director known for capturing Hollywood celebrities in the 1950's and 1960's.

Max Tatch was a son of eastern European Jewish parents. He died in Culver City at the age of 64 and is buried at Hillside Memorial Park. Tatch is survived by his great nephew Ronald Avery.

Scope and Content

The Max Tatch collection contains 7 linear feet of photographs, negatives, print materials, correspondence, and ephemera that pertain to his professional work. These professional materials document his work as a freelance photographer with various home and landscaping advertising companies around southern California. He captured the interiors and exteriors of houses in San Fernando Valley, Los Angeles County, Ventura County, and Palm Springs. This collection also contains images overlooking the Pacific Ocean near Malibu, Marina Del Rey, Redondo Beach, and Rancho Palos Verdes. Though few, some photographs within the collection also include photographs of personal trips taken to Piercy, Garberville, and Willits, California. Additionally, the collection contains professionally taken photographs of Max Tatch.

Organization and Arrangement

The photographs were assigned a number by the photographer. It is unknown what the exact significance of these numbers were. These photographs, if numbered, were arranged in numerical order. Unnumbered photographs were arranged with other photographs of the same geographical location. Other unnumbered photographs that did not correspond to any within the same geographical location were then grouped together with others containing no number last in the collection. Some photographs were kept with magazine or newspaper clippings relevant to the photograph and were kept with the corresponding photograph.
