Historical Note:

Tin-Tan, created in 1975, was the first Chicano magazine with an international perspective. It also promoted local Chicano artists and writers. It advocated a unified, pan-Latin American approach to Latino issues, especially in the San Francisco Bay Area. It was published by Editorial Poche-Che, and along with San Francisco's Galeria de la Raza, is credited with helping to rediscover and publicize the life and art of Mexican artist Frida Kahlo. The title Tin-Tan suggests a tribute to 1950s Mexican film star, Germán Valdez aka Tin-Tan. Dressed in zoot suit-style, he influenced the vocabulary and postures of Chicanos at the time.

Alejandro Murguía, a founding editor of Tin Tan, is a two-time recipient of the American Book Award, most recently in August 2003 for This War Called Love: Nine Stories published by City Lights Books. His memoir The Medicine of Memory: A Mexica Clan in California published by University of Texas Press, has been nominated for the Victor Turner Prize in Ethnographic Writing. His past books include Southern Front an American Book Award winner in 1992 and Volcan, Poetry from Central America. He was also a founding member and the first director of the Mission Cultural Center for Latino Arts. He is a current faculty of the Latina/Latino Studies Department in the College of Ethnic Studies at San Francisco State University.
