Historical Background

The Society for Pentecostal Studies (SPS) is a scholarly association devoted to the academic study of the Pentecostal and Charismatic Movements and related traditions. Fuller Seminary is designated as the official depository of the society. Holdings include administrative papers, financial ledgers, and correspondence related to the society's journal, Pneuma, and its newsletter.

SPS grew out of conversations over dinner at the Ninth Pentecostal World Conference in 1970. It was organized to address the theological and historiographical needs of Pentecostal pastors, teachers and scholars. Of the 139 delegates to the World Conference, 108 signed on as charter members under the leadership of William W. Menzies of the Assemblies of God, Vinson Synan of the Pentecostal Holiness Church and Horace Ward of the Church of God (Cleveland). The stated purpose was "to serve the church world by providing an authoritative interpretation of the Pentecostal Movement."

At first limited in membership to classical Pentecostals, in 1982 it opened to those of other persuasions such as Wesleyans and Charismatics from mainline denominations as well as "outside" scholars of the traditions. The journal published by SPS, Pneuma, was established in 1979.
