This MS has been reproduced in facsimile in 2 Volumes, and published by the University Press, Manchester. The following note is taken from the Introduction.

There is a supposition that this Chaucer MS. belonged to the Order of Bonshommes at the College of Ashridge. Others are of opinion that its original home was in East Anglia. It has been further conjectured and among those who held this opinion was the Rev. Henry John Todd, librarian of the fourth and last Duke of Bridgewater that the MS. was included among "the old conventual treasures" in the MS. Collections of the Lord Chancellor, Sir Thomas Egerton, Baron Ellesmere and Viscount Brackley, to whom certain of the lands of the dissolved monastery at Ashridge were granted by James I., in recognition of his faithful services to the Crown. The only surviving son of Lord Ellesmere was created Earl of Bridgewater after his father's death. Some corroboratory evidence of the interest the Lord Chancellor took in the works of Chaucer may be deduced from the fact that Francis Thynne dedicated to him in 1599 his "Animadversions uppon the Annotations and correctons of some Imperfections of Impressions of Chaucer's Works." The father of Francis Thynne was William Thynne, the editor of Chaucer, who was appointed to the work by Henry VIII. There are two MS. treatises written by Francis Thynne in the library at Bridgewater House, which are also dedicated to the Lord Chancellor Ellesmere, and which include grateful reference to the material assistance afforded to the writer. No less a person than Francis Bacon also testifies to Lord Ellesmere's encouragement of letters. When addressing him on the question of the contemplated Memorial to the late Queen Elizabeth he speaks of him as "Not only an excellent Chancellor and Counsellor, but also an exceeding favorer and fosterer of all good learning and vertue."

Lord Ellesmere in later life did not sign his name in his books; nor does the Ellesmere Chaucer contain any Bridgewater signatures, but it bears a pressmark, which is believed to signify that the volume was entered in the catalogue of the library of John, second Earl of Bridgewater, who succeeded his father in 1649. This catalogue was made under his own supervision. In some of the books and MSS. belonging to the present Earl of Ellesmere, Bridgewater signatures are to be found. There is a copy of the "Flos Decretum," which is known to have been made by one of the Brethren at the College of Ashridge, and which contains, in the handwriting of the second Earl of Bridgewater, the words:-

"Ex dono Richardi Coombe armigeri."

This note can hardly have been made before 1650, although the MS. may have reached the family at an earlier date, with the "Egidivs de Regimine Principum," which bears the same entry concerning its acquirement. After the dissolution of the monastery at Ashridge, of which voluntary surrender was made by the last Rector, Thomas Waterhouse, the impropriation of Hemsted, in the neighbourhood, was rented by Waterhouse in conjunction "with one Combe," and on his death in 1554, a Richard Coombe, his cousin, was left his executor. It is possible that besides these volumes other conventual treasures found their way from and back to the library at Ashridge in this manner.

The Ellesmere Chaucer was, however, at one time evidently the property of Roger, second Lord North. His signature appears on the end leaves with the motto "Durum pati," which he was in the habit of writing in his books, and there are also some verses in his handwriting. During the reign of Elizabeth, Roger Lord North, and Sir Thomas Egerton were fellow courtiers, they were both Privy Councillors, and both Knights of the Bath. Lord North occupied the position of Treasurer of Her Majesty's Royal Household, when Sir Thomas Egerton was Keeper of the Great Seal. Lord North was the senior by ten years, and died in 1600, whereas Sir Thomas Egerton lived until 1617. On the accession of James I. he was made Lord Chancellor of England, and held that office until within about ten days of his death.

There is a MS. Treatise of Political Science in the Bridgewater House library, entitled "Observations by T.B.," which is dedicated to Roger Lord

North, and which bears both at the beginning and at the end the signature of the first Earl of Bridgewater, a circumstance which seems to show that some transactions, either by gift or sale, took place between the two houses.

A few of the names which appear on the end leaves of the Ellesmere Chaucer have been traced as follows by the kind offices of Dr. Warner of the British Museum, later Sir George Warner.

Edward Waldegrave, of the Friars, Sudbury, was the son of Sir Thomas Waldegrave, Knt., of Smallbridge in Suffolk, he died in 1500.

His elder brother Sir William Waldegrave, K. B., of Smallbridge, had a daughter Margaret or Margery who married Sir John St. John of Blesto.

Their daughter Margaret or Margery married Henry Grey of Wrest (son of Sir Henry Grey, de jure Earl of Kent).

Margery Seynt John was doubtless one or other of these ladies.

Sir Robert Drury, Knt., of Hawstead, in Suffolk, Speaker of the House of Commons died in 1536. His first wife was Anne, dau. of Sir William Calthorpe, Knt., of Burnham Thorpe, in Norfolk.

Thomas Calthorp was probably a relation of Anne Calthorp.

Sir Robert and Lady Drury had the following children.

1. Sir William Drury, Knt., Privy Councillor, M.P., died Jan. 7th, 1557/8.
2. Anne, married 1st George Waldegrave, son of the aforesaid Sir William Waldegrave, and 2ndly, after his death in 1528, Sir Thomas Jermyn of Rushbrook, Knt., who died in 1553. Anne Jermyn died in 1572, and is probably the Domina Jarmin of the MS.
3. Bridget, married Sir John Jernegan, Knight, of Cossey (son of Sir Edward Jernegan by his first wife Margaret, dau. of Sir Edward Bedingfield). She is probably the Domina Jerningham or Jernegan.
4. Ursula, married Sir Giles Alington, of Horseheath, Cambridgeshire. She is probably the Domina Alington.

'The right worshipfull and my singula good Mr. Edmund Bedingfelde' is perhaps Edmund, the son of Queen Elizabeth's gaoler, Sir Henry Bedingfelde. Edmund Bedingfelde died in 1585, and his son Thomas, who died in 1590, married Frances, daughter of John Jernegan, of Somerley Town in Suffolk. This lady afterwards married Sir Henry Jernegan, of Cossey.

The Ellesmere Chaucer is on thin membranes of vellum in folio, in a modern binding, and was brought in 1802, with other MSS. and books from Ashridge, by the Rev. Henry John Todd, under the directions of Francis, fourth and last Duke of Bridgewater, for the purpose of being rebound, and placed at Bridgewater House, the London residence of the Duke. Bridgewater House and its contents, together with the Bridgewater Canal and various estates devolved by the Duke's will on his brother-in-law, the Marquis of Stafford (afterwards 1st Duke of Sutherland). They were further entailed under Trust on Lord Francis Levison Gower, the second son of the Marquis, who, in compliance with the directions of the Will, assumed the name and arms of Egerton, and was subsequently, for his public services, created Earl of Ellesmere and Viscount Brackley.

Gower, John. Confessio Amantis. Books 1 to 8 MS. 2nd Edition as dedicated to Henry Earl of Derby (afterwards Henry IV) with certain additions not found in the older MS. The first leaves of books I. V. VII. and VIII are missing and were missing in 1855.

Extract from a letter from R. Pauli to the Earl of Ellesmere of the 2nd April 1855.

"The escutcheon on the right hand border is quartered blue and red over which there is a lion - not a talbot. The first initial is formed by another escutcheon, red on a blue ribbon with a white swan in it a very common emblem of the House of Lancaster. At the foot of the page there is a black escutcheon evidently with three ostrich feathers. Now all these 3 shields contain, undoubtedly, the Arms of a member of the Royal House of England, so that the MS. originally must have belonged to a prince or king.

The handwriting is certainly that of the middle of the XVth century and very nearly resembles the character which the first printer adopted. I have therefore no doubt that it has been written after the poet's death, which happened in 1408.

The first leaves of books I. V. VII. VIII. have been wantonly cut out. There are two letters in the margin of folio 20 book I. looking very much like a sign manual (H. D.?) The empty leaves at the end contain some notices in various hands of the XVth Century being for the most part pre-scriptions against the ague. One says William Downes me tenet, which may prove that, the book, was not then a prince's or king's.

The handwriting, ink, orthography and general correctness of the copy are excellent. It contains the second edition of the poem, as it was dedicated by Gower to Henry Earl of Derby with certain additions not found in the older MS".

It seems probable that the book was the identical presentation or dedication copy made for Henry Earl of Derby. After his banishment, when Duke of Hereford - and the death of his father John of Gaunt, the possessions of the House of Lancaster were seized by Richard 2nd: which may easily account for the book passing into private hands, by sale or otherwise.

Henry of Lancaster was created Duke of Hereford in 1397, and was banished on the quarrel with Mowbray Duke of Norfolk in 1398. John of Gaunt died in February 1399, in the summer of which year Henry returned, ascending the throne as Henry IV on deposition of Richard II.

The Confessio Amantis was begun at the instigation of Richard II, but Gower, having become completely alienated from Richard, presented the completed work to Henry, Mr Yorke Powell says in his History of the Contest between the Houses of York and Lancaster.

Dr Ward in his "Chaucer" in the "English Men of Letters" series says that Gower in the 2nd Edition of the Confessio Amantis, dedicated in 1393 to Henry Earl of Derby, omitted the Exordium and altered the close of the first Edition, both of which were complimentary to Richard II. He also says that "Gower's Confessio Amantis" has retained its right to a place of honour in the history of our literature. The most interesting part of this poem, its Prologue, has already been cited as of value for our knowledge of the political and social condition of its times. It gives expression to a conservative tone and temper of mind; and like many conservative minds, Gower's had adopted, or affected to adopt, the conviction that the world was coming to an end. The cause of the anticipated catastrophe he found in the division, or absence of concord and love, manifest in the condition of things around. The intensity of strife visible among the conflicting elements of which the world, like the individual human being, is composed, too clearly announced the imminent end of all things. Would that a new Arion might arise to make peace where now is hate; but, alas! the prevailing confusion is such that God alone may set it right. But the poem which follows cannot be said to sustain the interest excited by this introduction. Its machinery was obviously suggested by that of the Roman de la Rose, though, as Wharton has happily phrased it, Gower, after a fashion of his own blends Ovid's Art of Love with the Breviary. The poet, wandering about in a forest, while suffering under the smart of Cupid's dart, meets Venus, the Goddess of Love, who urges him, as one upon the point of death, to make his full confession to her clerk or priest, the holy father Genius. This confession hereupon takes place by means of question and answer; both penitent and confessor entering at great length into an examination of the various sins and weaknesses of human nature, and of their remedies and illustrating their observations by narratives, brief or elaborate, from Holy Writ, sacred legend, ancient history, and romantic story. Thus Gower's book, as he says at its close, stands 'between earnest and game'; and might be fairly described as a Romaunt of the Rose, without either the descriptive grace of Guillaume de Lorris, or the wicked wit of Jean de Meung, but full of learning and matter, and written by an author certainly not devoid of the art of telling stories. The mind of this author was thoroughly didactic in its bent; for the beauty of nature he has no real feeling, and though his poem, like so many of Chaucer's begins in the month of May, he is (unnecessarily) careful to tell us that his object in going forth was not to 'sing with the birds'. He could not, like Chaucer, transfuse old things into new, but there is enough in his character as a poet to explain the friendship between the pair, of which we hear at the very time when Gower was probably preparing his Confessio Amantis for publication.

Extract from a letter from G. C. Macaulay Esq, to Mr Strachan Holme dated September 19th 1897, about the book.

(It is a folio written on parchment, leaves measuring about 14 inches by 9½ inches, at present consisting of 172 leaves, (three blank), written in double column, 46 lines to the column, [good and regular] writing of the end of the XIV or beginning of the XVth century.) The leaves are in quires of eight with catch-words, the quires lettered a, b, c etc. in the right hand lower corner of the first leaf, except where this signature has been cut away by the binder. (The first page has an illuminated border and a rudely executed miniature representing Nebuchadnezzar's dream of the image with head of gold, etc., and feet of mingled iron and clay, which is referred to in the Prologue of the poem. The initial O with which the poem begins has within it a shield half black and half red suspended by a blue ribband, and upon it a swan, argent. At the bottom of the page a black shield with three separate ostrich feathers argent set in bands or, and in the right hand margin a crest which I take to be a dog (i.e. a "gower" or wolf - hound) with collar on a chapeau with helmet below, and suspended underneath a shield quartered red and blue, [which I think had no device upon it, but I can speak positively about one only of the four quarters.] (At the beginning of each book there are floreated pages and large illuminated initials on gold ground. In other places the larger capitals (at the beginning the more important divisions) are gold on a ground quartered blue and red, and the smaller (at the head of other sections) are alternatively blue with red lines.) On f. 56 there is in the margin a grotesque painting of a man in armour with tail and legs of some animal, which has no connection I think with the subject matter.

The book has lost no less than seventeen leaves, all no doubt before it was put into its present binding. It originally had 189 leaves (three blanks) in 23 quires of eight leaves and one of five. The leaves lost are those which originally would have been numbered ff 2, 7, 49, 50, 51, 74, 76, 77, 79, 81, 82, 119, 138, 153, 154, 169, 170. With reference to the present numbering they are as follows:-

One leaf lost between ff 1 and 2

One leaf lost between ff 5 and 6
Three " " "	ff 46 and 47
One " " "	ff 68 and 69
Two " " "	ff 69 and 70
One " " "	ff 70 and 71
Two " " "	ff 71 and 72
One " " "	ff 107 and 108
One " " "	ff 125 and 126
Two " " "	ff 139 and 140
Two " " "	ff 153 and 154

There is an old numbering of leaves by separate books, up to the end of Bk VI, made probably in XV century. It appears from this that ff 2 and 7 were already lost when this numbering was made, but the rest up to and of Bk VI later. Possibly the cessation of this numbering may indicate that the first leaf of Bk VII was already missing at that time and the numberer was puzzled as to where the new book began.

(The writings on the blank pages at the end consist of prescriptions for the ague and for the plague (one with a date which is perhaps 1539); the statement several times repeated in a XVI century hand that the book belongs to William Downes; some English lines in XVII cent. hand signed T. P. Goodwyn and some notes about two parishes one in Cornwall and the other in Oxfordshire apparently belonging to the reign of Edward VI. The letters on f. 21 to which Pauli calls attention seems to me to be W. D. probably the initials of William Downes, and are certainly much later than the reign of Henry IV. On f 76 the name 'Phillipp Downes' is scribbled in the margin.

More interesting however than any question about the former ownership of the book is the character of the contents. I should say this M.S. was unquestionably written in the lifetime and under the supervision of the author himself, a distinction which it shares with one other of the numerous copies of the Confessio Amantis. As regards correctness it stands side by side with this other copy (viz:- the Fairfax M.S. in the Bodleian at Oxford) and the two are far superior to all the other MSS of the poem. Being independent of one another they serve mutually to correct each others errors, and as our authorities for the text of the poem nothing else can come near them. But another interest attaches to Lord Ellesmere's copy in the fact that it presents the poem in a form different from any in which it appears elsewhere, and very probably this was the form which the author finally adopted. The passages in the poem which are said by Pauli to be found only in this MS. and in the early printed editions are in fact found in several other MSS. e.g. one in the Bodleian, one in the library of Trin. Coll. Camb. and one in the British Museum. For these passages of course Lord Ellesmere's M.S. is the best existing authority; but also it is the only copy which gives these additional passages in combination with the Lancaster dedication of the poem. It is therefore what we may call the fourth recension of the work, the first having a dedication to Richard II and also a conclusion referring to him with respect: the second the same dedication, the additional passages and a new conclusion: the third a new dedication to Henry of Lancaster, the conclusion as in the second edition but the additional passages omitted, and finally this copy, which has the Lancaster dedication and includes the additional passages.

One more observation on the missing leaves - I am inclined to think that the lost first leaf of the first book (between ff 5 and 6) had a miniature upon it, for there is a space equal to that of ten lines or more, not accounted for. This may have been partly the cause of the loss of this leaf, but it will be obvious from my account that many leaves have been lost from mere carelessness.

As to the meaning of the escutcheons on the first page. I am hardly enough of a herald to give a decided opinion. I cannot help thinking that Todd was right in calling the crest a dog rather than a lion and if so it would be the crest of the poet himself. Surely if meant for a royal crest the animal would stand on a crown rather than on a hat. The shield below has not the poet's arms. Perhaps it is merely an ornamental quartering of red and blue. The other devices seem to have some reference to royalty, but the Lancastrian swan (which was worn by Gower himself in a collar presented by Henry IV) it is quite appropriate at the beginning of a work dedicated to Henry of Lancaster. I suppose the three ostrich feathers must have something to do with the Prince of Wales. I do not suppose that Henry IV ever adopted them as a device.

Dictionary of National Biography.

Article "Gower".

A very interesting manuscript volume containing other poems by Gower, belongs to the Earl of Ellesmere. It was presented to Henry IV by the poet, and came into the possession of Lord Fairfax who presented it to Sir Thomas Gower, an ancestor of its present owner, in 1666. It opens with an English poem, with Latin prologue and epilogue, entitled "Carmen de pacis commendatione in laudem Henrici quarti" which was printed in Urry's edition of Chaucer (1721), pp. 540 - 3 and in Wright's "Political Poems", ii 4-15. Eleven short pieces in French or Latin verse also in praise of Henry IV follow, and are succeeded by "Cinkante Balades" the most interesting section of the manuscript. They deal with love in all its phases, and are, the most poetical of all Gower's productions. They are believed to be Gower's earliest work. The volume concludes with a long French poem on the dignity of marriage, illustrated with stories after the fashion of the "Confessio". This was the poem which Wharton mistook for the lost "Speculum Meditantis". Finally Gower, in an address "al universe de tout le monde", apologises as an Englishman for his French. The whole of this volume, from which extracts had been printed by Todd and Wharton was first printed while it belonged to the Marquis of Stafford (excluding the opening poem) for the Roxburghe Club in 1818. A few of the pieces, notably the long poem on marriage, appear at the close of a few manuscripts of the "Confessio" (cf. Bodl. M.S. Fairfax, iii; Harl. M.S. 3869 M.S. Trin.Coll.R.3.2) Herr Stengel reprinted (after collating various manuscripts) "John Gowers Minnesang und Ehezuchtbuchlein LXXII. Angelo - Normannische Balladen". Marberg 1886.

- Johannes Hispanis. Flos Decretorum. M.S. Codex Membran: A large thick volume of leaves of parchment. On the first page is inscribed in the hand-writing of the second Earl of Bridgewater "ex dono Richardi Combe Armigeri"
The first part of the book consists of 19 membranes beginning with a prologue "Johannis Hispani orgine professoris juris canonici & civilis" and appears to contain cases or examples and ends with a declaration that the book had been written by Simon de Wederore de Trengre "frater domus Assherugge (Ashridge), ordinis Scti Augustini Lincolniensis diocesis" to the glory of God &c. and done for God and the House aforesaid and all the brethren of the same House &c. and in memory of various relatives of S. Wederore on the 3rd July 1368.
Then follows on 2 membranes a table (from Aaron to Zizania) giving the titles of the book of decretals compiled by Pope Gregory the 9th and on 9 membranes, Headings according to the Martinian table of decrees and decretals in alphabetical order with a declaration as to the copying &c. similar to the above and of the same date.
Then follows a prologue "fratre Martino ordinis pdicator^m dni pp pmaris et capllno" and the table itself, on 242 membranes, with a declaration as to the copying &c. similar to the above and of the same date.
The front page of the last named prologue has an illuminated representation of a kneeling monk in adoration before the Madonna and Child enthroned.
The book has illuminated and colored capitals with scroll-work and lined borders.

Juris canonici ac reportorium et uocatur Summa Summarum, Speculum.

9/H/3 07C5

Ad honorem et laudem nominis Jhesu Christi quod quando recolo debeo caput inclinare seu flectere genua saltim cordis, ut Extravagante De Immunitate Ecclesiarum capite "Decet", Libri vj. et De Consecratione distinctione j. capite "Apostolica"; et ad honorem beatissime Marie semper Virginis gloriose et omnium Sanctorum, et etiam ad proficium et utilitatem prelatorum, religiosorum et omnium clericorum incipit speculum compendii et reportorii iuris canonici, per quod quilibet litteratus quascunque materias et questiones iuris canonici ponderis faciliter poterit inuenire, et breuiter eisdem materiis et questionibus respondere, que continentur in textu et glosis decretorum et decretalium, unacum vj. libris et tribus glosis eiusdem et constitutionibus pape Clementis V et etiam in Summis Innocentii Hostiensis et compositionibus Raymundi, Gaufredi et quorundam famosorum in ecclesia doctorum sacre theologie, prout cuilibet lectori huius summe plenius apparebit, ac etiam in constitutionibus legatorum Ottonis, Octoboni, et in constitutionibus provincialibus videlicet Oxonie, Radyng, et Lameth, Pecham (Archbishop Peckam) et Bonifacii et statulis Curie de Arcubus Londiniarum Quicquid igitur in prato iuris spineto, tanquam lato et diffuso, sparsim seritur quasi in unum manipulum ex diversis spicis collectum breuiter hic collegi, ut attendat quod legitur capite de veteri iure (euncli) [Brit. Mus. "enn"] libro j ultra medium; ibi in tali prato spinoso et quicquid alibi diffuse queritur in hac summa breuiter inuenitur, xxxviij. distinctio "Hinc etiam". Ibi quicquid alibi queritur et hic momentanea inspectio tribuit quod in priori tempore vix post quadriennium contingebat, Institutiones in Prohemio "Cumque iti". Et quod in priori tempore ut sic a me et aliis simplicibus possint dubia, lata, obscura et difusa alibi huiusmodi sub compendio faciliter reperiri. Et quia regimen animarum est ars artium, scientia scientiarum, cum anime hominum sunt preciosiores omnibus aliis rebus et corporibus ut Extravagante De Etate et Qualitate Ordinum, capite "Cum ait ars", Et Extravagante De Penitentiis et Remissionibus, capite "Cum infirmitas". in fine, xij, questione j. capite "Precipimus", Valde ignominiosum est clericis ad hoc regimen vocatis causam ipsius regiminis penitus ignorare, sicut turpe est aduocato ius ignorare in quo versatur ut titulo De Origine Juris, libro ij. Igitur scientia iuris canonici sacerdotibus et potissime curatis est perquam necessaria iuxta illud Malachie, "Labia sacerdotis custodiunt scientiam et legem requirunt sui subditi ex ore eius quia angelus Domini exercituum est", xliij, distinctio, caput "Sit rector"; hinc Paulus ad Titum ait, xj. questio j. "Sacerdotibus vero", et "propheta", et Extravagans De Hereticis, caput "Cum ex iniuncto", et "Non sufficit prelatis bona conuersacio et morum honestas nisi addatur scientia doctrine, xxxvj, distinctio, "Ecce", in fine. Nec possunt sacerdotes qui docendi officium in populo Dei susceperunt pape iuris ignoranciam excusari sed potius accusari cum, secundum Apostolum Paulum, sacerdotes legere sacras scripturas amonentur et scire debent sacras scripturas et canones et quod omne opus eorum in predicatione et doctrina consistat atque edificent cunctos tam fidei scientia quam operum disciplina. Nulli ergo sacerdotum liceat ignorare canones nec quicquam facere quod patrum regulis poterit obuiare, xxxviij. distinctio, capita j. ij. et iij., et caput "Nulli sacerdotum", et Extravagans De Constitutionibus, caput j. Unde discretus querendus est sacerdos sciens solvere et ligare, De Penitentia, Distinctio vj. "Placuit", Extravagans De Penitentiis et Remissionibus, caput "Omnis", et caput ultimum, et Extravagans De Simonia, caput "Ex diligenti"; et caveat sibi index spiritualis ut non careat munere scientie; oportet enim ut sciat discernere quicquid debet iudicare quia iudiciaria potestas hoc ex-postulat ut quod debet iudicare discernat; De Penitentia, Distinctio vj. caput j. circa medium; et cum per ignoranciam cecatis aliis ducatum prestare ceperint in foueam ambo cadunt, unde versus "si cecus cecum conatur ducere secum in foueam ductor primo cadit", inde etiam in Psalmo dicitur "Obsecr-entur oculi eorum ne videant" etc. Cum ii obscurantur illi qui pre-eunt ad ferenda onera peccatorum facile sequentes inclinatur. Laborare ergo debent prelati et sacerdotes ut ignoranciam a se quasi quandam pestem abiciant, unde secundum Augustinum "Ignorans ignorabitur"; quod de illis intelligendum est qui adiscere poterant at ad hoc opera non dederunt, xxxviij. distinctio, ultima, et xxxviij. distinctio "Que ipsis", De Penitentia, distinctio vj, caput j. in principio, et Extravagans De Renunciatione, caput "Post translationem". Item cum ignorancia scripturarum est ignorancia Christi, xxxviij. distinctio, "si iuxta"; elaborandum est itaque sacerdotibus ut ab eis ignorancia propulsetur iuxta id Apostoli Pauli ad Thimotheum "Attende lectioni et exhortationi et doctrine et semper permane in hiis", xxxviij. distinctio, caput j. xliij. distinctio. Multis ne mereantur illud propheticum audire (custia) [This word is not in the Brit. Mus. MSS.] "tu scientiam repulisti et ego te repellam ne sacerdocio fungare mihi", xxxviij. distinctio, "Omnes" in fine, et Extravagans De Renunciatione, caput "Nisi cum predem". Pro defectu et pro defectu scientie potest quis beneficio removeri ut extravagante De Etate et Qualitate Ordinum, capita penultimum et ultimum. Scire ergo debent iura canonica et maxime ea que in iure canonico precipiuntur cum illa sint necessaris observanda quia quod precipitur imperatur et quod imperatur necesse est freri si non fiat penam habet et "quisquis preceptis canonicis non obtemperat reus est et fit debitor pene", xliij. causa j. questio, "Precipitur", et caput "Quisquis preceptum Domini". Item "hii qui mandata Apostolorum postponunt non solum rei sed extorres Dei fiunt, quod non solum nobis cavenda sed omnibus predicanda sunt", xij., questioj. "Dilectissimis" in fine. Item "si decreta Romanorum Pontificum non habeant per scientiam habeant de neglectu atque incuris sunt arguendi si vero habeant et non observent de temeritate sunt arguendi et etiam increpandi", xx. distinctio, "Si decreta". Ne quis ergo de cetero ignoranciam iuris canonici valeat honeste accusari, hanc summam composui quam brevius et levius potui secundum modicum scientiam mihi a Domino ministratam qui "unicuique propria diuidit prout vult", j, "Multe". De Consecratione, distinctio iij "Cum tantum", et hoc feci pro rudibus et penitus ignorantibus ius canonicum et posissime pro prelatiis et sacerdotibus cum ignorantia iuris canonici sint eis inter ceteros magis periculosa, xxxviij. distinctio et caput et caput "Si in laicis". Hoc humiliter ab eis pro labore requirens ut cum ad dignissimum sacramentum corporis Christi accesserint inter ceteros peccatores mei memoriam habere dignentur seu aliter prout eis placuerit pro me orent quia qui pro aliis orat pro se ipso laborat, iij, questio j. "Nulli", j, questio j. "De Cotidianis", De Penitentia, Distinctio j "Ipsi sacerdotes", xxxvj. distinctio "Siquis vult". Hanc etiam summam feci ad proficuum et utilitatem pauperum clericorum, ut si forte copiam librorum non habuerint, hic collecta sub compendio multa de hiis inveniant que requirunt et ea sicut scripta sunt ab aliis nec comprobando nec improbando reliqui quia de mea propria sententia nichil posui in presenti summa sed tantum aliorum famosorum in ecclesia doctum summas referens et ut plurima et ipsorum verba ponens et librorum ac summarum et etiam scriptorum de quibus assumpta sunt nomina et loca assignans, relator sum minimus, non inventor. Hoc que sciendum est quod ubi aliqua materia seu questio incipit et plures sequuntur questiones, semper intelliguntur illius decreti seu decretalis et questionis vel glosse et doctorum qui proxime sequuntur ibidem. Et siquam diuersitatem et etiam contrarietatem determinationum seu dictorum circa eandem materiam in questionibus diuersis inveneris, intellige illa esse diuersorum doctorum dicta et interdum quodlibet illorum secundum diuersitatem circumstanciarum et casuum, posse etiam rationabilius observari. Noli etiam lector pie de auctore seu potius de compilatore huius summe sed nec de calams quo scripta inquirere curiose sed attende ea que in ea scribuntur, quia non sunt mea dicta sed aliorum prout in hac summa poteris ad plenam videre, nec est multum considerandum quis dicat sed potius quod dicatur, ix. distinctio "Ego" et caput "Noli". Noli etiam lector benigne aut propter impericiam compilantis an propter rusticitatem sermonis aut forte propter inconsequenciam ordinis ea que hic ad instructionem fidelium simplicium utiliter colliguntur ante plenam inspectionem indignando respuere sed prius si placet animo patienti cuncta diligenter inspiciendo revolve post hoc vero prout tue insederit rationi aut recipe aut contempne ne forte ante contempseris videaris magis ex odio quam ex recto iudicio reprobare quemadmodum dicit Ieronimus in prologo Ysa hiis verbis, legant prius et intelligant at postea si voluerint despiciant ne videantur ex odii presumptione ignorata dampnare cum multi "ante iudicant quam intelligant et ante culpant quam iterando lecta perquirant" xxix. distinctio, "Sciendum". Vero lector ora pro collectore et dilligenter suscipe quesita cum alieno labore et guade de inventis sine proprio labore. Nomen autem collectoris exprimere nolo ne collectio vilesceret cognito collectore. Et ut notitia huius summe facilius habeat et materie in ea contentae citius valeant reperiri singulorum librorum plurimas premitto rubricas, secundum ordinem rubricarum decretalium multas rubricas alias adiungendo, et super qualibet Rubrica adiuncta ponitur in fine aliqua littera alphabeti et Rubrice sic adiuncte a rubricis decretalium discerni valeant evidentur et ubi una littera alphabeti non sufficit tunc littere combinantur et hec patent plenius intuenti.

Lydgate, John. Translations of La Danse Macabre, De Regimine Principum. MSS
 The book so labelled on the back contains the following items:-
 (1) Initiatory Verses.
 (2) Lydgate - Verba translatoris, Danse Macabre.
 "The whiche daunce at St. Innocentis Portreied is with all the surplusage
 To shewe this world is but a pilgrimage"
 L'Envoye de translatoure
 (3) A resoun of the rammeshorne a sotel resoun of the crabbe, a resoun de fallacia mundi.
 Quoted from 2nd verse Hoccleve - De principum Regimine, with a prologue and verba compilatoris.
 At the end of the latter occurs "Iste liber constat Aluredo Corneburgh de camera regis".
 The "s" of 'Regis' is an old form, and appears to have been mistaken by someone for a "b" who has altered the word 'regis' to 'regibus' in error.
 (4) A Poem on the subject of Joseph in Egypt and his love for Asueth, an Egyptian lady, ostensibly a translation from Latin for "Labele".
 (5) An Itinerary entitled "The Weye unto Rome and soo too Venyse and to Jrim".

36/A/13 U5L3

- (6) An unfinished Poem on the death of a 'maystresse'.
 Four lines of the beginning have a charter about Nuper Monasterium de Feversham, and are written at the end of the book. At the beginning is written the name Elyzabeth Gaynesford, and after two blank folios is written "Ihesu mercy, Margarete et Beautrice, ma ioye M. Shirley".
 The book is written on vellum leaves, and has been rebound in full Morocco, and bears the Egerton Crest in gold.
 The book is rubricated throughout, and there are a few orna-mental letters.

Missal of Dame Margery Byrkenhead M.S. This is so called, apparently, because at the end there is in black and red old- English text these words:- "This x booke longeth to Dame Margery Byrkenhed o' Chester". It is not a missal but a book of antiphons, processionalis and anthems for feast days and special occasions with the music of the notation used in the 14th and 15th Centuries, and appears to be for use at a nunnery, though priests are to take a share in some of the services. Some part of the building appears to be called the City of Jerusalem. Some of the Services are commemorative and a lengthy one is provided for the solemn washing of feet on Maundy Thursday. Among the music is a carol with a refrain of lullaby commemorative of our Lord's Nativity. Lengthy rubrics in late middle English occur throughout and the book ends with hymns, prayers to the Virgin and Hours in Latin and Hymns and Prayers in English, and a petition for admission or taking of the Vows at a Convent. The date of the book permits of the surmise that Dame Margery Byrkenhead may have been a Nun at the dissolution of the Monasteries and Convents in England.

Penry, John, Journal of (See also Vol. 34/C/30 - 1/4. 78, 80+81 of this List).

483 U7C3

A book containing many appeals to a "Right Honourable Lord of high place", presumably the Lord Treasurer Burghley, for justice and right with Queen Elizabeth, on behalf of himself his family and his brethren. There are references to the Lord Treasurer, and other members of the Council, including the Earl of Essex, and a great many to the Romish Anti-Christ, prelati cal oppressors, &c.

34/B/20

A good deal of unpleasant prominence is given to the writer's "blood and God", and the sufferings of the "Saints" of the time. It seems likely that this is the Journal or Memorandum Book of Penry, the Puritan Martyr, as one or two things are attributed to him in it, and it contains a declaration that he is not the author of the Martin-Mar-Prelate Tracts. The book may have been obtained when Penry was arrested, and have found its way into Lord Chancellor Ellesmere's possession in connection with the trial of Penry, and it may also account for the fact that Penry was not charged with writing the Martin Mar Prelate Tracts.

The book contains a curious account of an attempt by Puritan women, by a deputation, to influence the Speaker of the House of Commons, and the Lord Chancellor, as Speaker of the House of Lords. Apparently they succeeded in interviewing the Speaker of the House of Commons, but not the Lord Chancellor and they appear also to have been punished in some way by Mr. Justice Young, to whom a letter is addressed in two versions, beginning thus:-

"Mr Yong that God whose truth you gaynstand, whose sayntes you persecute and whose dishonor you mayntayn and uphold will eyther (wch I earnestly dessir) in his mercy turne yor heart vnto him or break you to pieces in his fierce wrath. I testify this vnto you . . . heer vpon ye Earth, and shall witnesse it aghenst you in that great day of the Lord's appearing except you repent. Repent you then good Sir befor it are too late.

For you deal with him and aghenst him whoe is a consuming fire"

The book contains also a Confession of Faith.

This book is marked by the Rev. Henry John Todd Memorandum Book Ld. C. Ellesmere Miscellanies which plainly shows that he had not read it. It is extremely difficult to decipher. There is no note or memorandum by the Ld. Chancellor in it.

Mr Todd was Chaplain and Librarian to Francis Duke of Bridgewater and held the same office for the first Duke of Sutherland (formerly Marquis of Stafford as Beneficiary under the Duke of Bridgewater's Will) He wrote a History of Ashridge and edited Editions of Spenser and of Milton.

Star Chamber. A book containing:- 2768 0786
(1) Proceedings in the Court of Star Chamber from the 1st Henry VII, which is prefaced by the same Introduction as Book No. 35/C/30, but with the following addition:- 34/C/37

Anno tertio H. Septim capit primo.

The Courte was authorised by Acts of Parliamente to reforme vnlawefull maintenances, gevinge of liueries, signes and tokens Retainers Embraseries, vntrue demeaninge of Sheriffes in makinge of Pannels, and other untrue retournes, takinge of monie by Juries, greate Riottes, and vnlawefull assemblies.

It has some of the entries contained in Volume 2654, but appears to deal more with ordinary affairs.

It has lengthy reports of cases, copies of patents, &c., and several pages of notes in Lord Chancellor Ellesmere's handwriting.

It has also two papers:

- (1) An Index to a Treatise or book of precedents referred to on folios 14 to 31, which indicates the Jurisdiction of the Court.
- (2) A paper headed "Observation of causes used to be harde and judged in the Courte of Starre Chamber", which also indicates the jurisdiction of the Court, and an Index (probably an Index of precedents) to the Statute of the 5th Elizabeth against Forgery.

of the Court as the Volume No. 34/C/37, which has some entries and dates con- 35/C/30
-current, does not always show the same proceedings. They extend from the 1st Henry VII to the 6th Henry VIII.

It is prefaced by the following Introduction

Henricus Septimus

Rex Anglie

In the time of this most prudent prince The Court of Starchamber did ex-amine Riotts Rowtes vnlawful assemblies forcible entries misdemeano^{rs} deceites forgers falshoodes and periuries maintenance contemptes and other comon crymes comitted to the offences of the kinges lawes, and his loyall subiects. And it was conferred then ther in matters in State, of peace and warre, wth forreine princes of leagues, and league breakers, of intercourse of hearinge and an-sweringe Embassado^{rs} and of the amendmt of lawes at home, of the reformacon of idle people and vagaboundes, of the excesse of aparell in all persons, of the excesse of meates drinks and costlye fare:

As it maye appeare in pte by the presidentes followinge: The Courte wolde then here of anye matter, were it of never soe smale value if there were therein contained any breach of lawe. The Courte then did here of per-ambulacons of the kings lands, of woemen's dowers, of Maryne causes, of wrongfull imprisonments of heresie, of murder, and treason:

And at many of theis matters the kinge himselve was present, as maye appeare over euery presidente wheare the kinge is written The Courte did then sitt in a manner euery daie in the Tearme: Such was the kinges care of the comon quiette of his kingdome as whosoe marketh the same well, maie rightlie and reasonablye saie, that kinge Henry the Seauenth was a right reformer of a disordered Comonwealthe.
