PROCEEDINGS
of the
1972 Pre-Primary Election Convention
of the
California Labor Council on Political Education

Friday, April 14, 1972
Sheraton-Palace Hotel
San Francisco, California

Call to Order

The 1972 Pre-Primary Convention of the California Labor Council on Political Education was called to order at 10:27 a.m. in the Sheraton-Palace Hotel, San Francisco, California, by Albin J. Gruhn, President.

President Gruhn then led the delegates in the pledge of allegiance to the flag of the United States of America.

Invocation

President Gruhn introduced the Reverend Frank Buismato, Saint Boniface Catholic Church, San Francisco, who presented the following invocation:

"Oh God our Father, we ask You to be present with us this morning. Enlighten our minds and our hearts so that we may make decisions which will benefit all our people so that we may choose those candidates who respect the dignity of men, who will work for social justice and for peace. We ask this in the name of Your Son."

Joseph L. Alioto

Mayor of San Francisco

Introduction

President Gruhn then presented Mayor Joseph L. Alioto to the delegates for the welcoming address.

"At this time it is a great privilege and honor for me to have the opportunity to present a man who in my opinion is one of the greatest mayors in our great country.

"A man who understands the labor movement, its problems, its policies and its programs; one who understands the problems of all the people and one who has been giving the necessary leadership to his city and helping to try to give some direction throughout our country in meeting the tremendous problems in our urban areas. We are happy that he is here with us this morning. And I know, being a great mayor from a great labor town, that he will give us a message which will be beneficial to all of us.

"The Honorable Joseph Alioto."

Welcome to San Francisco

The Honorable Joseph L. Alioto
Mayor of San Francisco

"Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, I have a couple of questions.

"The first question is: If you fellows are as powerful as people say you are, how come you are in a Sheraton hotel and nobody has offered you $400,000 and you are paying for your own rooms!

"And secondly, I have to thank you for completing a personal pledge to me. You will remember that last year I told you that San Francisco had been boycotted by a group of agricultural councils made up of agricultural employers. We had been boycotted because of certain actions we took, which they deemed to be too much in the interests of the labor unions. And I told you at that time that you owed us in all 15,000 labor delegates to make up for that boycott.

"These agricultural groups were in fact complaining about another boycott, you see. But this was their boycott. It was a different one.

"And I told you at that time, you remember, that you were doing very well, that you were up to about 13,500 but that you still owed me 1,500 more delegates to make up for that boycott.

"I am very happy to report to all of you that you actually came through with an additional 3,000. So we are way ahead. And I appreciate it!

"So now we owe you folks something. The balance of payments has been changed just a little bit.

An Attack on Labor

"We are very happy to have you in San Francisco. It is an important time, I think. It is a very very important time for the labor unions despite the fact that we are told all the time that the labor unions are getting too powerful, at a time when monopoly is running rampant in this country, at a time when they are selling antitrust cases as though they were pieces of merchandise and dealing with them as though they were pieces of merchandise, at a time when conglomerates have the kind of power they have never had in the entire history of this country, at a time when the Department of Justice is engaged in selective indictments in which the labor unions and their friends are particular targets, and simultaneously there is a policy of discrimination in favor of the friends of the administration in that Department of Justice, at a time when all of these things are happening they say the labor unions are too powerful.

"The fact of the matter is that you aren't powerful enough and that not enough states and other governmental agencies are dedicated to a proposition which is very obvious, and that proposition is that the prosperity and the well-being of this country depend primarily on the prosperity and the well-being of working men and women. That proposition ought to be self-evident.

"But there are few people who act on it. And if this is supposed to be conversation, just let me remind you of a couple of very unpleasant facts. Every time there has been a struggle against inflation in the past four years in this country the working men have been made the victims of that struggle. Every time.

"We have a policy of moral bankruptcy that we spoke about before that still basically continues in effect. That moral bankruptcy is the proposition that the way you fight inflation is to deliberately create unemployment. This is the way they started out, you remember. We had to deliberately create unemployment in order to fight inflation. And finally, when that bankrupt policy doesn't work and inflation continues unabated, then they set up a price board and a wage board. And it doesn't take too much time for everybody to recognize that all that wage board and that price board are doing is to simply insure the employers that they are going to keep their wage rates down but that they are going to grant almost every application for a price increase that they make. That is pretty much what this organization has turned out to be. And every time there is just a suggestion, just a suggestion that maybe your political activity is getting stronger and has to be checked, then you get a series of indictments directed against labor unions, picking out those who are particularly conspicuous in this area, in an attempt to scare off all labor unions.

"Thank God those who are the victims of those particular indictments are not only fighting back, but now have the government in the position where the government is afraid to go ahead with the litigation which it started. And all the time this is happening within the Department of Justice. You get a succession of three things that are almost incredible, and yet aren't widely known. The man who is head of the criminal division of the Department of Justice who brought those indictments against the labor unions, a man named Will Wilson—he brought those indictments against the labor unions—he gets involved in what is admittedly a crooked deal with a Texas promoter involving a violation of countless laws. They force him to resign all right because they can't stand the pressure since the facts are so clear. They do force him to resign, but no indictments. But it is all right to indict the labor unions. This is the man that did it. They didn't indict him, but they did force him to resign.

Double Standard Prevails

"Then you get a situation with ITT, where manifestly somebody is committing perjury. You not only have contradictory stories by people who are talking about the same events, but you have a change in story every time you turn around. You have a shredding of documents. Just imagine what would have happened if in precisely the same circumstances some labor union had deliberately destroyed its documents. Just imagine what would have happened. Just imagine!

"So you have obvious perjury. Let's see if anything comes out of that perjury.

"The one thing that is clear is that the Asst. Attorney General in charge of the antitrust division said he was opposed—'unalterably opposed' are the words he used at one juncture—to permitting a merger between ITT and the insurance company. And after some White House intervention he changes his mind and very shortly thereafter gets a federal judgeship appointment out in Chicago

"If the labor unions tried anything so crass and so transparent, do you think you would get away with it?

"The plain fact of the matter is that there are two standards in this country. Two standards, one for big business and another standard for the labor unions. And that is why what you are doing here is so important.

"Now I have made no bones about the fact that when I ran for Mayor in 1967 I would have been nowhere, and I mean nowhere, without the support of the labor unions. That was the only discernible support I had. I would have been nowhere.

"So since we are unfamiliar, can I say something just slightly critical? Just slightly critical!

"I have been doing some campaigning throughout this country. And I think it's all right. As a matter of fact, I guess it has to be that way; but I wish there was some little solution that we could get on this. I guess it is all right. But the notion that the labor unions must, by and large, maintain a posture of complete neutrality during primaries has meant in some instances that all of those whose basic philosophy is opposed to the philosophy of the labor unions have their advocates out in the open while the labor unions are literally standing by with their hands tied behind their backs.

"Now it may very well be, as President Johnson once remarked, that primaries don't mean anything. That may very well be. But maybe it isn't true any more. Maybe they are beginning to mean a little bit of something. We are confronted literally in state after state where those whose philosophy is opposed to that of the labor unions are right out in the open, engaged in unrestricted advocacy, and they are doing a lot of things for their candidates that they ought to be doing and those conspicuous friends of labor are left with a certain neutrality in the labor unions at this juncture. As I say, I can understand the reasons for it and it might well be something that you can't do anything about. But I do point out that it could have an adverse effect on those candidates who stand out and who over the past have stood out and who in terms of their forward-looking movements stand again for that original proposition I mentioned—that the prosperity of the country depends basically upon the prosperity of working people.

Stabilizing Effect Needed

"Anyway, welcome to San Francisco. We are just delighted to have you in San Francisco. The deliberations that you are about to undertake are important not only just to you, but they are important to the community generally. Because, as I have pointed out to a lot of my friends, over the years when we didn't have the kind of consumerism that we have today the only notable and discernible voice of the consumer were the labor unions. And today, although others may be a little noisy, a little bit more noisy than the labor unions, the blunt fact of the matter is that the labor unions are still the strongest voice we have and the most progressive voice we have in the halls of Congress and in our legislatures for the interests of the consumer and for the interests of most people generally.

"Today the labor unions stand as the best balance wheel we have against those who take things to excess. Nobody has, for example, any problem about environment; nobody has any problem about ecology. But we have a lot of problems with those who think that jobs and economic development should somehow be destroyed because of some new rabbits they are chasing.

"I don't know whether I told some of you folks—I think I may have in Los Angeles—about the ecologist who was in my office recently. This great conservationist was telling me about how we had to conserve everything. And at one juncture he even said: 'And most of all we have to conserve the Everglades down in Florida.'

"I looked down, and the fellow was wearing a pair of alligator shoes!

"And there is a lot of this general feeling in this area. I think only the labor unions can draw that delicate balance between the claims of environment, which are real enough, and the claims of economic development, which are also quite real. Because without economic development and without jobs, without a decent job and a decent home and a decent neighborhood and a decent school not all the environment in the world is worth anything at all. Unless you have those basics, not all the environment in the world is worth anything at all.

"Anyway, welcome to San Francisco. Have a good time in town. And I told you last year—and this still goes, only for the labor unions—if you are having any trouble at all having a good time in San Francisco, call the Mayor's office and we will see it to personally.

"I will see you later."

Welcome to Delegates and Visitors

Albin J. Gruhn

President

California Labor COPE

President Gruhn then addressed the convention in these words:

"I wish to take this opportunity to welcome the delegates and guests to this 1972 Pre-Primary Convention of the California Labor Council on Political Education.

"In order to get the proper perspective on this election year of 1972, it is essential that every delegate read the report of the Executive Secretary-Treasurer, which you received this morning. It details the activities and progress made by our California Labor Council on Political Education since the Pre-Primary and Pre-General Election Conventions in 1970 and it outlines the challenges we face in 1972.

"It has been my pleasure to work with our Secretary-Treasurer, our Executive Council members and many of our local COPE leaders during these two politically productive years. Thanks to the splendid support and cooperation our state organization received from the local COPEs, labor was successful in being one of the prime factors in bringing about the election of a new United States Senator, John F. Tunney, the re-election of a majority of liberal Congressmen from our state and the election of a majority of liberal legislators in the California State Senate and State Assembly. The results of these victories at the polls are particularly self-evident when we review the state legislative enactments of the past year, which brought about the biggest single-session legislative gains in social insurance benefits for the workers and their families in this state's history. These are concrete results, which should convince every union member and his family of the vital importance and necessity of participating fully in organized labor's political action program by registering to vote, by voluntarily contributing to COPE and by supporting and voting for COPE-endorsed candidates.

"Elections are a vital part of the hard work necessary to make democracy work. The democracy and freedom that exist in our beloved country must be continually nourished if they are to survive.

"Our convention here today is a vital ingredient in the democratic process. We have and we must continue to help make our democratic form of government work to bring a full measure of freedom, justice and equality for all. This is the only real bulwark against the threat of the tyranny of totalitarianism whether it be from the Fascists or the Communists.

"Thus, under our democratic system of government we find ourselves in another election year. Let's make the election year of 1972 an even greater political success for the people than 1970. Let's elect more Congressmen who will vote for the legislative program of the national AFL-CIO. Let's elect more state legislators who will vote for the legislative program of the California Labor Federation, AFL-CIO. Let's elect a President who will support the legislative program of the national AFL-CIO, not one who tries to make scapegoats of workers to cover up the failures of his administration.

"Let all levels of the leadership and staff of the labor movement make political action a priority from now until the general election on November 7. Total commitment is vital for victory in 1972.

"We won many election victories in behalf of the people in 1970. We can and we will win more in 1972!

"Thank you very much."

President Gruhn next called upon John F. Henning, Executive Secretary-Treasurer of California Labor COPE to introduce to the delegation the guest speaker, U.S. Senator Mike Gravel.

Mike Gravel

U.S. Senator from Alaska Introduction

With these words, Secretary-Treasurer Henning introduced Senator Gravel:

"Mr. Chairman and delegates, it is my pleasure to present the junior Senator from Alaska, who came to San Francisco at our request for the sole purpose of addressing this Pre-Primary Convention. Senator Mike Gravel is one of the figures of hope and liberalism in the Senate.

"At the present time the great issue before the Senate is whether the policies of this government and of this administration may be purchased by the forces of corporate wealth in this country. Senator Gravel is one of those who has insisted that the Judiciary Committee hearings on the appointment of Kleindienst to Attorney General be continued until we know all of the facts and all of the truth on the relationship between International Telephone and Telegraph and the White House.

"Two weeks ago the Senate majority leader, Senator Mansfield, said that he thought the hearings should end, that they weren't relevant. That has not been the position of the liberals in the Senate, it is not the position of Senator Gravel and indeed I am sure it doesn't represent the kind of thinking that inspires the trade union movement of this country. If the majority leader is not prepared to lead the liberals in the United States Senate against the Nixon administration, he should surrender the position and give it to someone who is willing to fight for the liberal principles in which all of us here believe.

"The time has passed when we can have weak leadership. The time has passed when we can have weak leadership speaking for the liberal movement in the United State Senate.

"Senator Gravel is our hope. He represents the liberal ideals of the great traditions that began in this country with Franklin Roosevelt, and those are the principles which he espouses and defends today.

"Delegates, the junior Senator from Alaska and a very vigorous friend of the trade union movement of this nation, Senator Mike Gravel."

ADDRESS

The Honorable Mike Gravel United States Senator from Alaska

"Thank you very much, Jack.

"Albin and other distinguished members here on the podium, I want to say that I am deeply honored to have this opportunity to be your keynote speaker. In fact, you may not appreciate how much of an honor it is to me.

"This organization, the COPE organization of the AFL-CIO here, represents about five times as many people as we have in the entire state of Alaska!

"So you can appreciate that my coming before this audience in the largest state in the United States and the third largest constituency within this state is certainly an opportunity for me to get across my views, my ideals. I will not only talk of the economy, because talking about the economy and castigating the President is like carrying coals to Newcastle, but I will try to talk a little bit about the cause of the state of the economy and what might be some solutions.

"Let me say that labor is probably the third largest and most important constituency in this nation. And I say 'constituency' because that is just what it is. It is people who band together not because they are interested in politics, but because they are interested in their own well-being. And that is what the labor movement is. It is a constituency.

"There are two larger ones. The one that is immediately larger is, of course, the government - bureaucratic constituency, which some refer to as the 'military-industrial complex'. And the one that is larger than that is the business-corporate constituency, which not only controls our government but controls our society.

"I outlined this in great detail in a book that I have written called 'Citizen Power', and I will talk a little bit about that toward the end of my presentation this morning. But I would like to note that as a constituency, labor's credentials are probably the finest in the entire nation and in the history of the nation because not only have they concerned themselves with the problems related to their own immediate center of interest, but labor has always attached itself to the broad spectrum of social ills and tried to correct them.

"I can recall in the state legislature where it wasn't only unemployment compensation that the labor leaders were involved in, it wasn't only the rights of their immediate memberships, but they were lobbying and deeply involved in improving education, improving health, improving generally the quality of life that we all hope for and want to enjoy. This is the responsibility in which the labor movement acted. And it was different because the business community didn't do that. The other constituencies didn't do that. They just focused on their immediate problems, and that was it. When they had their bacon in their satchel, they cut out. But labor was in there for all of the issues all of the time, not only on the state level but on the federal level. And this I want to compliment you for doing.

"I want to compliment your leadership, under Albin Gruhn and Jack Henning, for opening up new sections and realizing that there are new constituencies burgeoning in this country. There are the women's constituency, the blacks, the Spanish-speaking people who have to have a voice, who have to be heard, who have to be integrated into our organization. And you have given special focus to this, which I think demonstrates a great deal of forethought. I think that is testimony, of course, to your fine leadership.

"I want to note that I have many good friends in California. In fact, George Moscone was responsible for my having the services of one of his aides today. George is a good friend of mine. But when we talk of friends, you have heard the expression from most young people in politics—(and I still consider myself young)—they speak of mentors. You know, somebody who they listen to, who they seek guidance from. Well, I have a mentor in California. He is an unusual one because he is not old and gray. He is somebody that you know and he is one that, along with the COPE organization, in 1970 was out there working his heart out with you to see that the Assembly of California and the Senate of California were in Democratic hands because of the very vital problem with reapportionment. And this young man, my mentor, would get on the horn and say 'Mike, you are going to Alaska. Why don't you just dogleg a little through California? It won't cost you much more, and we could use your presence at fund-raisers and appearances for various Assembly and State Senate candidates.'

"At his behest I came through again and again. And I am proud to say that I have had my slight hand along with you and along with this young man in bringing about a change in part of the government of the State of California.

"I understand you are endorsing people here today. You are going to make these judicious decisions. And I would hope and I know you will endorse this gentleman because he has done yeoman service for you and he is one of your stalwarts in the Assembly. But I wonder if you would give him a little special endorsement for old Mike here, because he is one of my closest friends in the entire United States in the area of politics. And that is my good friend, Wally Karabian.

"Wally, would you please stand?

"The issues in 1972 I think are going to be overshadowed by one important thing. That is the simple fact that, although we Democrats right now seem to be disorganized and in a pell-mell situation without defining who precisely will be our candidates and it causes a great deal of concern with Democrats right now and it's a matter that they don't seem to focus on, and if I have heard it once I have heard it a thousand times, and that is: 'Because we have a lot of candidates running, we are in trouble' and that 'We are spending our resources.'

"Well, that is not the case. Regardless of who will be our nominee—and I think the Democratic nominee will number with in two or three individuals, but any one of those individuals can and will beat Richard Nixon in 1972!

Credibility is an Issue

"Certainly the foremost issue involved is going to be credibility. This is something that we Democrats in the past have been plagued with, but I think that there is nobody who is plagued with credibility more than Richard Nixon is right now. Credibility in the foreign area with respect to statements he made on Pakistan, with respect to his secret plan to end the war and in the domestic area with respect to his statements and his policies as far as having a full employment budget, which is the greatest hoax, the greatest rhetoric that we have ever seen. And, of course, with respect to the credibility on a personal basis involving ITT, involving his dealings in San Diego and involving something that I have heard very little about, something that is rare on the newsstands, and that is a biography of Howard Hughes called 'Howard' by Noah Dietrich. And in that biography, which is fresh on the newsstands, is a chapter that is called 'The Nixon Loan'. And he goes back into details. Now this was somewhat of an issue in 1960, but we never had the documentation, we never had a quote from somebody who talked to the President, or at that time the Vice President, about this loan. And we have this quote now. And I think that the American people begin to see that the corruption was not of a peripheral nature, it was not institutionalized, at arm's length, but it involved the President, the chief executive himself, in these understandings.

"Now just as an aside, anybody who isn't in politics and thinks that Richard Nixon knew nothing about the ITT $400,000 or $600,000 or $200,000 sum is politically naive. That kind of money does not change hands in any political party, within any political context, without the head man knowing all about it. So there is no way that he can break away or obviate his interest in that area.

"But probably the area that you in the labor movement will focus on the most will be the area of the economy and, really, the false rhetoric that we have been fed. The test of this issue will be the length of the memory of the American citizen. I say 'length of the memory' because that may not be necessary. Things may not be of such a nature this year that they will not have to recall back one, two and three years to know what has happened. But just in case they do have to have a memory, it won't be difficult to recall back that this President has made all kinds of pledges in the campaign in 1968 to solve the problem of unemployment and yet when he had the power in his very hands he not only didn't solve the problem of unemployment but he sabotaged efforts to solve the problem of unemployment.

"I am on the Public Works Committee in the Senate, and we spent a whole year holding hearings to write a new EDA bill and accelerate the Public Works Act.

We came to Los Angeles, we went to Seattle. We listened to the testimony of people who had problems, people who were unemployed and we wrote a piece of legislation. It took us a year to do it. This legislation would have brought about in this country 440,000 jobs. But that year's effort by a Democratic Congress was wiped out in ten seconds—the amount of time it took for Richard Nixon to scribble his name on a piece of paper, which was a veto message. Four hundred and forty thousand jobs that could have gone to the United States' unemployed.

"The Democratic Congress in 1969 and 1970 recognized the problem of unemployment and passed the Emergency Employment Act. That act would have created 150,000 jobs. We got it through. We got it through a year later because the first year we passed it Richard Nixon vetoed it. One hundred and fifty thousand jobs. Now it has come into law because he didn't veto it the second time. And so we have jobs that are being created by this program, but a year late. They could have been created a year earlier.

"We Democrats have castigated Richard Nixon over and over again over the past two and a half years until mid-August. We castigated him for the lack of economic leadership that he brought to this nation which brought us almost to the brink of economic disaster and we pointed to him and said: 'He is not doing anything.'

"We in the Congress the year before, in August, passed a law to give him the tools, if he chose to provide some leadership.

"Oh my God! He did provide some leadership. And now we question whether or not we were wise in giving him the tools and we question, with his leadership today, if we wouldn't be better off without it. Because if you look at the problems of inflation they are not better, they are worse. Look at what has happened with respect to the use of this government power, wage and price control, and you find out that in a very diabolical sense nothing really is happening to prices but all the focus of attention and all the controls take place with respect to wages. What have we let ourselves in for? And we are in it up to our eyeballs. Will we get out of it? I think it remains to be seen. Because Richard Nixon this year will have a lot of money, an unbelievable amount of money, because he is very good at raising it. And I have never heard any criticism of it to any great degree except from within the labor movement, under the leadership of George Meany. And that was that on August 15 you saw the greatest fund-raiser in the history of man, you saw the President come forward with a program to try and do something for this nation. But in full point of fact it was to service a minority.

Giveaways to Big Business

"There is one area I won't criticize Richard Nixon on, and that is that he takes care of his own. He knows who got him in office, and he is taking very good care of them. And he took care of them on August 15 with an accelerated depreciation, which was instituted the January before but which was stopped by Ralph Nader and which has now been confirmed, in effect, and with the seven percent investment tax credit.

"This nation presently is operating at seventy-five percent capacity. That means we have a capacity we are not using. And so the President offers as an incentive to improve the economy a program wherein this capacity will be increased.

"Well, that obviously won't work and it hasn't worked because if I own a business I am not going to increase the productive capacity of my business if there is no demand for my product. And I don't care what incentives the government will provide because I would take their incentives and I would then go bankrupt.

"So what happens if I have the choice of taking the incentive and spending it or not spending it? I will obviously put it in my pocket. And that is exactly what has happened, and that is why the hundred largest businesses in this country are more prosperous and have a better profit picture this year than in many a decade. And the reason is because of the investment tax credit and because of the control of wages and not the control of profits.

"I said that he was a fund-raiser because the most diabolical aspect of the decision on August 15 was to make the seven percent retroactive to April. That means that if I were the president of General Electric and decided to build a plant in July, when I woke up on August 16, and I read in the newspapers what had happened I had just received a gift that was not related at all to my economic decision, I had just received a gift of seven percent on what I was about, what I had already decided to do.

"Now how do you think it works for Maurice Stans when he is going back to the president of GE and other places and he says 'Hey. Look what you have got on August 15. Just give us ten percent of it.' And obviously, they will give him ten percent of it because they have been serviced.

"How can we fight this problem? There is only one area.

"Where do the Democrats get their money? And I know by and large that COPE is objective and nonpartisan, but I also know that most of our money in the Democratic Party comes from the people within the labor movement. So the only prayer we have this year of getting any amount of funds to do battle in this election of course will come from the labor movement.

"You have been asked to double up. I hope that the response from your membership will do just that—double up and realize that you can get more with your dollar this election, in 1972, than you can through any other use.

"Let me go to another problem because, regardless of who is elected President of the United States on the Democratic side, the first thing that that person will have to do will be to address himself to the problems that caused this economic situation. Because in truth of fact—and Richard Nixon has said this very often—he inherited a good deal of the problems. And he did. Of course, he ran for office with the intent that he would offer leadership and solve these problems. He hasn't done that. In fact, he has exacerbated these problems.

Struggling with the Effect of War

"What has caused our economic situation? What has caused inflation, what has caused unemployment? The war. And I would like to take a few moments to talk to you about the war, because that is going to be an issue in 1972 even though Richard Nixon has said that it won't be an issue. Because if it is not an issue, what Richard Nixon is saying is that the American people are devoid of any moral sensibility. And I don't think that is the case. I think we have a deep moral commitment to what is right and wrong in our society.

"The war is what has brought about our inflation; and fighting inflation has brought about high interest rates, which in turn has caused more inflation, which in turn has caused greater unemployment. So regardless of what Democrat gets elected, the first thing he will have to do is stop the war, stop the money that is being spent in this area.

"The second thing he will have to do is to try and get some control of the runaway warfare state that this nation is today.

"Now understand me correctly. I love this country deeply. The United States of America to date is the greatest nation in the history of man. We have brought mankind to a higher plateau than he has ever experienced in the entire history of mankind.

"So the issue is not whether or not superdoves or hawks love their country. All Americans love their country. The issue is: What are the decisions we make to improve our country? Not to keep it in the status quo, because that is not good enough. And if there is anybody that knows this, it is you in the labor movement who fight constantly at the bargaining table, who negotiate constantly for improvements. If that is done on an individual basis, it is done on a national basis. And we have to fight constantly for improvements in this nation because we can do more for this country, for the people who live here, and we can do more for the world.

"One of the things that stops us, one of the things that curses us at this point in time is this war. And it has nothing to do with patriotism. It has something to do with something very simple—the ability of human beings to make a mistake.

"I was at a cocktail party when the North Vietnamese offensive started, and a friend of mine came up and said: 'Mike, we ought to just bomb the hell out of them and get it over with once and for all.' That was a simple solution, and certainly an answer to his frustration.

"I asked him: 'What have they done to you that you want to bomb the hell out of them?'

"Do you think for a moment that the people of Indochina represent a threat to the United States? You, as taxpayers, spend more money on fighting the war in Indochina than the gross national product of that area. How could they conceivably be a threat to you?'

"The statement made that 'We are trying to give them a chance at democracy' is laughable. You don't have to read any secret documents. Just read the newspapers for the last six months, and you will see what happened in the election last October when the person who is Vice President of South Vietnam couldn't even qualify to run for President, when the last guy who ran against him is in jail and when the young fellow who had a chance, who was popular in the assembly, to run against Thieu is also in jail, Tran Dak Chou, whom I met, and when the newspaper publishers who opposed the regime are in jail it's not a democracy and we ought to stop kidding ourselves about it. It is a dictatorship. It is our dictatorship.

"We can fight for our dictatorship or we can leave our dictatorship alone.

"So I don't think that we have any argumentation when we talk about trying to give these people a chance to survive. It is ridiculous.

"We see the President of the United States go to China. And I applauded that. In fact, that is the only thing he is going to be known for in the history books—the fact that he went to China.

"But just stop and think a minute. Here he is sitting in Peking toasting these people. They are Communists. There are eight hundred million of them. They don't represent a big threat to us, but they are a possibility as a threat to us. So he sits down and breaks bread with them. And 600 miles away we are taking your tax dollars and your moral fiber and bombing these people to oblivion.

"The only nation in the world that can be a threat to us is the Soviet Union. And the Secretary of Agriculture has just worked out an agreement with them to sell them our agricultural products in exchange for oil and gas. Maurice Stans was over there cutting a deal in behalf of ITT on the quiet, to give them some of our new technologies.

"This exchange is good. But it has got to be measured. We have got to be careful because there are immaturities. But does it make any sense that the people who have the power to do us harm, that we sit and break bread with them and that the State Department writes a little pamphlet so that our businessmen can go to Moscow and learn how to drink vodka and not have a hangover so they can cut a good Yankee deal the next morning? Does it make any sense to do that in Moscow and then go to Indochina and with your tax dollars kill people because they are Communists? Of course not.

"We are beset with a schizophrenia. These people offer no threat to us, and it costs us money. Just in the last ten days your government has spent almost half a billion dollars. Half a billion dollars—money that could go to solve our problems in this country. We have a big budget deficit. It causes additional inflation. The President vetoes employment bills that could help our people because we don't have the money. We can't solve the problems of our inner cities because we don't have the money. Where is the money going?

"Let's look at NATO for a minute. We have got 310,000 Americans in Europe. Do you know that as a taxpayer you spend more per capita on the defense of Europe than a European spends on the defense of Europe? That means that you think there is a problem in Europe and they don't think there is a problem, as big a problem, because they are not willing to put their money on the line. But you are.

"I think we have got to begin to get a grip on all of this. Because if we don't, you won't have the money to solve, and adjust yourselves to, the social problems that have to be met.

"So when you are out fighting the economic issues, pay some attention to what brought about these economic issues. Because you won't be able to solve them if you don't. And I would hope that this nation, that the labor movement would begin to take its place in opposition to the war.

"I was proud when George Meany was the single American of stature to stand up to the President of the United States on the economic issues when it was unpopular in August and to say that these things that were being done were wrong 'Because they are hurting my people, the people I represent, the people in the labor movement.'

"I was equally proud when three leaders of labor went to Hanoi to see the bombing first-hand and came back and reported to their membership. That took guts. But I am proud to see them begin to take a role, and to take a leadership role, in this area.

"The problem is a simple one. We have made a mistake. And when I say that, it is not unpatriotic and it is nothing to be ashamed of. If I stood here as a person and said 'Hey, I have never made a mistake in my life and I never will', you would snicker and say 'Why he's an idiot. Of course he has made mistakes, and he is going to make some in the future.' And you accept that.

"But if I make a mistake and I come forward and say 'I have made a mistake', you would say 'Mike, you have shown character and we are proud of you.'

"Why is it that when we collectivize ourselves in communities, in states and as a nation that we are afraid to admit when we make a national mistake? Because if we did admit it we would still develop the same strength of character as we do as individuals. And if it is virtue to admit a mistake as a person and say 'I will correct it' and 'I will do better the next time', how much more virtuous it would be as a nation to say 'We have made a mistake and we are turning the page and we are going to go forward.' How truly this nation could offer leadership to the world—not by stationing Americans with guns all over the world, but by offering leadership through example, through character. This character can only be built today if we meet the challenge that we face today in saying 'We have made a mistake and we are deeply sorry and henceforth we are going to change for the benefit of our people and for the benefit of what we can provide throughout the world.'

Putting Secrecy in Perspective

"Let me touch briefly on something. The reason you know my name is because of the Pentagon papers, but also because of how we made this mistake.

"We made this mistake for one very simple reason: Because our democracy tolerated secrecy.

"It is very difficult to go around the country and tell people in a reasonably successful society, in a reasonably affluent society that we have some very serious dangers today and that one of those dangers and the most important danger is the very simple fact that you don't know what goes on in your government. When you elect a person President of the United States, how can you tell him what you want done or whether you approve of what he is doing if you don't know what he is doing?

"We have 535 people who are supposed to run this country. One is the President, and under him is the executive. All the rest of them are appointed. The rest is Congress. And many times Congress cops out to the executive. More times than I am proud to admit. That I hope can change. It does change. Do you know what changes it sometimes? Pressure. Pressure by the labor movement, by other people who backed the person, who gave him money and then when it came time to vote were standing at his doorstep and saying 'Hey Charley, we know you are going to the floor to vote. We sure hope you will vote on our issue' and then they walk him down to the elevator. That's how you make sure he is voting for your interests. You stay right with him. That's a pressure group, and that is what you are. That is what you have got to be. But you can only be an intelligent pressure group if you know what is going on. So secrecy is pretty fundamental.

"Now with today's government in our society we confuse secrecy with privacy, because privacy is important. That is personal freedom. But when you are talking about running government, it has got to be open. And if it is not open it is not a democracy; and if it is not a democracy, I don't want any part of it. And I don't think you do either.

"A lot of people get confused and fearful. In fact, when I released the Pentagon papers Barry Goldwater the next day made the statement that 'What we ought to do is take away Senator Gravel's clearance, his top secret clearance.'

"Well, as you know, Senator Goldwater has been around the Senate a lot longer than I have. In fact, he has run for President of the United States. But that was about the dumbest statement I have ever heard. Dumb. I don't get my clearance from the government, I get my clearance from the people of Alaska!

"I didn't get elected and go to Washington and sit in the hotel until I got a call from J. Edgar Hoover to tell me 'Senator, we have checked up on you. You are OK. Now you can go take your seat.' That is not the way this nation works.

"I have got a clearance until 1974, and it will be up for renewal then. And if the people of Alaska want to lift that clearance, they can; if they want to renew it, they can. That's where my clearance comes from.

"Last week in debate I was debating Senator Robert Gold, the Chairman of the Republican Party, and I posed this rhetorical question to him. I said: 'Senator, you are from Kansas. Now if in Kansas they had a camp that had barbed wire around it and they had some ovens inside of that camp and they were cooking people every so often and somebody had classified the existence of that camp top secret, if you had knowledge of the existence of that camp and the fact that they were cooking people would you release that secret to the American people?'

"What do you think his answer was?

"He started stammering and started talking about 'Senate prerogatives'. In other words, he couldn't answer that question in his own mind. In other words, he was so enraptured by the fact that another human being, not elected, who has a little rubber stamp and has a little ink pad and could take that rubber stamp and stamp on a piece of paper 'Top Secret' and then everybody bows down to that piece of paper, that has now got a little bit of lettering on it. There is no law that classifies things as top secret or secret or classified. It is an executive order. And as far as I know, the President of the United States doesn't make any laws in this country. Because if he starts making laws, then the next step is the rubber hose down in the basement.

"They are taking me all the way to the Supreme Court of the United States. And if I lose, then quite obviously a United States Senator, when he speaks his mind on the floor, when he feels that he should give information to the American people, then they will get to him very easily. They will get the Justice Department after him.

"I have been under glass ever since last July by the Justice Department. And you had better believe that my tax forms have been messaged probably more than any other human being's in this country. You know!

"And I am still clean. And I intend to get tougher and tougher because I am clean. And I can afford the luxury of sticking it to them! And I intend to do just that!

"Let me give you some slight argumentation on the ridiculousness of this whole secrecy thing, because there should be no secrets in a democracy. Ninety-five percent of the stuff that is secret now should not be secret.

"There are two areas that they say we need secrecy for. One is national defense.

"Well, in 1966 Congress passed a Freedom of Information Act. That act says that you people, if you have a good attorney, can go find out what the Labor Department is doing. That is when the Republicans are there. When the Democrats are there, we will let you in and we will talk about it. But when they are there, you get your attorney and you go find out forcibly. You have got to use a crowbar. But the law is there that permits you to do this. The law says that it is possible for you to find out what is happening in the Labor Department, in the Commerce Department, in the CAB and all the others. And the Interior Department.

"But when it comes to the national defense, the Department of Defense, you have no right to look at it because it's too important. 'We don't trust you people.' That is what your government is saying. 'We don't trust you people with these important decisions. We only trust ourselves, because we have been elected and we are anointed with some special wisdom.' That is all wrong.

"There used to be a cliché in France that 'War is too important to leave in the hands of generals.'

"Well, let me tell you that the survival of man is too important to be left in the hands of politicians! There is only one group, and that is the people!

"We need some secrecy, such as in the area of military affairs, what we call 'order of battle'. Where our Polaris submarines are right now: That should be a secret. Our weaponry: That should be a secret. Our troop movement: That should be a secret.

"But interestingly enough, the decision to use those troops, the decision to use those submarines: That should not be a secret. And that is at a higher level. That is a policy-making decision. And that is what the Pentagon papers were all about—the policy decisions that took place for the last 20 years. The Pentagon papers showed me that the people who led this country weren't evil. Harry Truman, Dwight Eisenhower, Jack Kennedy, Lyndon Johnson, Richard Nixon. They are not evil people, they are human people and they are subjected to a very human experience, and that is that power corrupts and absolute power corrupts absolutely. So there is only one check on our leaders, and that is the check of knowing what the heck they are doing, whether it is in government or any other area of society.

"The other area, to give you the argumentation, that we need secrecy for is our foreign policy. Well, let me tell you—and I am sure you share my view—that if your country is cutting a deal with another country and your leaders can't tell you about that deal, then maybe that deal is not in your interest. And we have had too many of those deals that we don't know anything about, which bring us to war and which are not in the interests of the people. How can you tell the President, 'Hey, we disagree with you on that,' if you don't know what he said? He can go to Peking and he can talk in privacy. I don't object to that. But if he has cut a deal in Peking, you have the right to know it and I have the right to know it so we can either approve it or disapprove it.

"The other part of foreign policy they say we need to have secrecy on, is to negotiate with foreign governments. Well, if my government, which is a government of self-determination, is cutting a deal with a foreign government and their leaders don't want to tell their people, then maybe that deal is not in the best interests of those people. And if that is the case, I don't want my government making deals with foreign governments that are not in the interests of their people, because I believe in self-determination.

"So I think some good healthy examination by the people of both countries with respect to deals would be very profitable and very beneficial. If we can break down the barriers of secrecy we can open this country up to change, change that you can bring about as an important and powerful constituency. You have been fighting with one arm tied behind your back. Release that other arm and you will see the benefits that you fight for burst out and accrue to the people of this country.

Tax Reform is Needed

"Let me give you one slight example that I enumerated and enunciated in my book called 'Citizen Power', which will be out in May. Just imagine the colossus of the labor movement if it really latched on to this idea. You are hearing a lot about tax reform. Of course you are hearing about it from one individual who is running for President who has been in power in his state for nine years. And they have never had tax reform. The only way to judge a person is by what he has done. But all the other politicians now are talking about tax reform, including myself.

"Let me tell you: You are not going to see tax reform. You are going to hear it over and over again, you are going to lobby for it, but you are not going to see the government of this country really bring about tax reform because it is impossible under our present structure because this government is controlled by the major element of society, and that is the business-corporate constituency. And they are not interested in tax reform.

"In this book that I have written I show where the poor people and the lower-income people pay for the cost of government. I show it from the very facts and statistics from the Treasury Department, not things that I have put forward.

"How can you change that? It can't be changed by government, because what you are saying is that the people who control government are now going to have to change the laws. And it isn't going to happen that way.

"But it can happen another way. The idea that I have put forward is to have a single tax, a single tax on income and wipe out all the other taxes on the federal level. I mean all taxes. And wipe out all deductions. The first deduction is the first loophole.

"Let's take corporate taxes, just as an aside. We beat the drum about corporate taxes, that they are not paying enough.

"Well, the corporate taxes in this country bring in twenty-six billion dollars. That is the revenue from corporations in this country.

"Do you know how much we subsidize the corporate structure in this country? Sixty-three billion dollars. There is a great deal going. And do you know how they work it? They work it through the tax system. If the head of an oil company takes me to Sans Souci or takes me to dinner at the restaurant here and he buys me a $30 lunch, who do you think pays for half that lunch? You, the taxpayer, pays for half of that lunch. The rest the business pays for.

"And we quarrel in Congress over twenty-one cents federal aid for a hot lunch program for kids.

"No. We need a change, and we need a change badly. And there is only one group that can bring about that change. And that is not the Congress of the United States and that is not the executive of this country. The change is going to come about by the people of this country acting as citizens.

Labor as the People's Lobby

"This single tax I have laid out can be accomplished through a constitutional amendment. And this constitutional amendment can be brought about by changing and making legislation pass through 38 state legislatures. Now think of it. Think of the club that the labor movement has through all the state legislatures, unified with a major tax revolt could bring about a single tax. Under this scheme anybody making less than $18,000 a year would be paying less taxes than he is now. You get a tax form and it shows the amount. And that would be with a limit of sixty percent taxes. And of course, a wealthy person, would say: 'Now you are not being fair.' The present table says 'We tax you up to seventy percent.' But who pays seventy percent? When you get your tax form, it is a stroke down. It is a PR sheet. They have seventy percent rates, but there is nobody that pays those seventy percent rates. Anybody that is making that kind of money knows how to get out of paying the seventy percent rates! So who are we kidding?

"Let me just conclude by saying: Those of you who want to buy that book, I will make a buck off of it. And those of you who might want to latch on to this theory may have something to work for in effecting a real change in society. All I have tried to outline in this book is what you people have been doing ever since the inception of the labor movement. You have union power. Union power comes from people, citizens who join the labor movement and who want to improve their status in life. That is not only union power, that is citizen power. And more power to you for doing it.

"Thank you."

The recommendations for Districts 11, 14 and 22 were temporarily set aside by request.

Secretary Henning moved that the Executive Council's recommendations for the State Assembly be adopted with the exceptions of Districts 11, 14 and 22.

The motion was seconded and carried.

District No. 11

Secretary - Treasurer Henning moved adoption of the Executive Council's recommendations in District No. 11. The motion was duly seconded.

Delegate Art Carter (Contra Costa County Central Labor Council, Martinez) rose to speak in opposition to the Executive Council's recommendation due to the fact that the Contra Costa County COPE had changed from its original "Open" position, and requested that incumbent John T. Knox (D) be endorsed by the convention. Secretary-Treasurer Henning then spoke in support of Delegate Art Carter's request.

The motion to adopt the Executive Council's recommendation of "Open" in the Democratic primary in District No. 11 was lost.

Secretary Henning then moved that the convention endorse John T. Knox in the Democratic primary in District No. 11.

The motion was seconded and carried.

Chairman Gruhn then called for the vote on the motion to adopt the Executive Council's recommendation for the three remaining parties in District No. 11: "No endorsement," Republican; "no endorsement, Peace and Freedom; and "no endorsement," American Independent Party.

The motion carried.

District No. 14

Secretary Henning then noted a correction in the Executive Council's recommendation in the 14th Assembly District. "No endorsement (R)" was corrected to read "No opposition," there being no Republican candidate on that ticket.

He next moved adoption of the recommendation submitted by the Executive Council, as corrected. The motion was seconded.

Delegate Charles Clancy (Pile Drivers No. 34, San Francisco) spoke against the Executive Council's recommendation.

James B. Booe (Communications Wkrs. District No. 9, Sacramento) and Leslie K. Moore (Auto, Marine & Specialty Painters No. 1176, Oakland) spoke in support of the Executive Council's recommendation.

The motion to adopt the Executive Council's recommendation was carried.

District No. 22

Secretary Henning next moved the adoption of the Executive Council's recommendation: "Open (D)," "No endorsement (R)." The motion was seconded.

Delegate Emerson Street (Santa Clara County Central Labor Council, San Jose)

spoke in opposition to the Executive Council's recommendation due to the fact that the Santa Clara County COPE had changed its position earlier in the week from "Open" to an endorsement of Robert M. Herhold (D).

The Executive Council of the California Labor COPE had not been notified of this change prior to convention time

Secretary-Treasurer Henning supported Delegate Street's position.

Chairman Gruhn then called for the vote on the Executive Council's recommendation for the Democratic ticket of the 22nd Assembly District.

The motion to adopt the Executive Council's recommendation was lost.

Secretary-Treasurer Henning next moved that the convention endorse Robert M. Herhold in the Democratic primary of the 22nd Assembly District.

His motion was carried.

Chairman Gruhn then called for the vote on the remaining portion of the Executive Council's recommendation in the 22nd Assembly District, "No endorsement" (R).

The motion was carried.

Secretary Henning then moved adoption of the Executive Council's recommendations for the State Assembly as a whole and as amended by convention action.

The motion was seconded and carried.

Chairman Gruhn then called upon Thomas A. Small, chairman of the Committee on Resolutions for a report.

Report of Committee on Resolutions

T. A. Small, Chairman

Chairman Small explained that the Resolutions Committee had no resolutions submitted to it on which to report and thanked the members of his committee.

Executive Council Power To Alter Endorsements

Secretary-Treasurer Henning then offered the following motions:

"Mr. Chairman and delegates, I have three motions to offer, two of which are concerned with the freedom we should have on the endorsements.

"Mr. Chairman, I move that whenever and wherever an office is left open in the action of this convention the Secretary-Treasurer, subject to the approval of the Executive Council, shall be given full power to act and make endorsements after consultation with the local COPE anywhere they exist."

The motion, duly seconded, was carried.

"Mr. Chairman and delegates, I move that the Executive Council shall be authorized to withdraw the endorsement of any candidate should his actions be detrimental to the labor movement."

The motion, duly seconded, was carried.

"Mr. Chairman, I have received from the auditors, the report on per capita paid membership and estimated membership by locals as of January 31, 1972.

"I move that the auditors' report be accepted, deemed read and made a part of the official proceedings of this convention."

The motion was seconded and carried.

Report of Committee on Constitution

The Chair then called on John A. Cinquemani, chairman of the Committee on Constitution, for a report.

Chairman Cinquemani stated that there were no resolutions up for consideration by the Constitution Committee and then thanked the members for attending that morning's meeting.

He next moved that the committee's report be accepted and that its members be discharged with thanks.

The motion was seconded and carried.

Closing Remarks

John F. Henning

Executive Secretary-Treasurer

"Mr. Chairman and delegates, just a word on the importance of us working very hard to secure the election of the endorsed candidates.

"By reason of the endorsements we made here two years ago we were able to turn around the legislative direction of California, and we came out of the session last year in the Social Security field with unprecedented gains. But we have to fight hard to hold the majority in both houses. That is our common responsibility. We ask all of you to work as hard as you can to make sure we control both houses of the legislature in California. We are doomed if we don't control both houses, because we face in the remaining two years a Governor who is not sympathetic to our fundamental purposes.

"In the Assembly we have essentially a 43-37 majority, but it takes 54 votes to override the Governor's veto in the Assembly. We can count at the most perhaps some 43 or 44 votes.

"Now that means this: We have to bargain. In terms of social legislation, we have to bargain with conservative legislators and we have to bargain with the employers. If we don't bargain, we come back with nothing for the people we represent.

"We came back last year with a $171 million annual increase in the social insurance programs. But if we had had the override veto power on the floor of the Assembly and the override veto power on the floor of the Senate we would have had greater increases.

"In the Senate we need 27 votes to override the Governor's veto. We have a very thin, 21 - 19, liberal majority. You understand what the problem is."

Introductions

John F. Henning
Executive Secretary-Treasurer

Harry Jordan

"I would like to introduce, just briefly, three of our State COPE members who led the services we have introduced in the last two years. I know you have met some of them before, but I would like to present first Harry Jordan, who heads our black minority approach under the name of the State AFL-CIO in California.

"This is Harry Jordan of the Laborers of San Diego, who is with us full time and who directs our black activities."

Bill Gallardo

"And for the Spanish-speaking Chicano community of California there is Bill Gallardo from the Plasterers and Cement Masons in Santa Ana, who is also full time with us, relating our movement to the three million Spanish-speaking in California, Bill Gallardo."

Mary Yunt

"Since January 1, we have had a women's section in our State COPE organization, but we are not espousing any separatist position. The work of our new Women's Director is to mobilize the wives and the daughters of trade union members all throughout the state. The women members of the trade union movement will continue to work through our regular COPE structure, but there is a tremendous potential if we can mobilize the women voters of this state. Director of our Women's Section now on a full-time basis is Mary Yunt, who has been the director of the women's activities in Orange County for the past two years."

Dave Jessup

"We have also in the hall, but not on the podium, the director of our youth effort, which we started two years ago, the Frontlash organization—Dave Jessup. He is not here, but I would like to give an indication of what he has been doing.

"Since January this year Frontlash has registered 59,550 voters in California through 16 projects which they have sponsored under our direction.

"In case you are interested, the young voters registered sixty-five percent Democratic, twenty percent Republican."

Fred Smith

"Now also here is the Assistant Director of COPE from the Fire Fighters, who has been serving with us for many years, and ably. Fred Smith."

LaMar Gulbransen

"And from the national organization, the Area Director of the National COPE organization, a guest at our convention today, LaMar Gulbransen.

"Thank you, delegates."

Adjournment

Chairman Gruhn then drew the business of the convention to a close with these words:

"Well, it appears that we are near the close of our session.

"I wish to express the appreciation of the Chair to the delegates for the orderly and businesslike manner in which you helped me to conduct this convention. And I know that, as the Secretary has mentioned, we need votes in Congress, we need votes in the legislature. And if we do our job well, we will get those votes and we will get results. So let's all get in and do our part between now and the June election and then on into the November election."

A motion to adjourn, duly seconded, was accepted by Chairman Gruhn. The motion carried, whereupon he then adjourned the 1972 Pre-Primary Election Convention of the California Labor Council on Political Education at 1:20 p.m., sine die.

REPORT OF SECRETARY-TREASURER

To: The 1972 Pre-Primary Convention of the California Labor Council on Political Education:

GREETINGS:

During the year and a half since the windup of the 1970 election campaign, the period covered by this report, the working people of California and the nation at large have heard repeated predictions from the Nixon Administration that Phase I — and later Phase II — was just about to take hold and bring inflation under control — down to the two to three percent level by the end of the year — and that the rise in unemployment had "peaked."

But these predictions have proven false and absurd. Month after month unemployment and prices have generally climbed; worker income has remained relatively static but corporate profits have scored whopping gains.

In fact, government reports indicate that the nation's 100 largest corporations chalked up a sensational 76 percent rise in profits last year and that the after tax profits of all corporations in the second half of 1971 were 19 percent above the same period of 1970 — rising nearly three times faster than the 6.6 percent increase in total wage and salary payments to all of the nation's workers.

Little more than a month ago the Bureau of Labor Statistics reported that the average hourly earnings of some 47 million production and non-supervisory workers in the private economy remained unchanged between January and February at $3.54 and were just three cents higher than in December.

A few weeks later the government reported that wholesale prices in February had made their greatest jump in 14 years, auguring even higher retail prices in the months immediately ahead.

Within the period covered by this report, interest rates have climbed to their highest level in 100 years, the U. S. dollar — once the strongest currency in the world — has been devalued on the world market by amounts ranging from eight to 25 percent and workers' wages have been frozen while prices, rents and profits have skyrocketed.

The restrictive monetary and fiscal policies that were in effect from 1969 to August 1971 have had disastrous results. But even more disquieting have been the moves by the incumbent administration and its agencies that suggest it looks longingly at the lures of coercive capitalism and a controlled state.

For example, in March of 1971 the building trades lost their right to free collective bargaining when the administration imposed specific wage controls on construction workers, controls that still stand.

And five months later, all U. S. unions lost wage bargaining freedom under the Nixon Administration's latest attempt to impose an effective economic policy.

Moreover just two months ago the Nixon Administration nearly succeeded in having the U. S. Senate impose a permanent ban on strikes in the transportation industry, a ban that would have applied to teamsters, maritime workers, airline and railroad workers.

And all of the propaganda machinery of the nation's corporate community is still busily at work attempting to condition the public mind to force acceptance of this critical compromise of the worker's right as a free man to withhold his labor from powerful corporations that often flaunt the law with impunity and call on a cooperative administration to bail them out of their financial misadventures.

Despite misgivings, the AFL-CIO attempted to cooperate with and contribute to the national administration's promised efforts to bring some equity and balance into the nation's economic life while seeking to stem inflation and meet the unemployment crisis.

But as AFL-CIO President George Meany noted recently in referring to the resignation of all AFL-CIO members from the Pay Board:

"We participated in Phase II in good faith desiring — despite our misgivings — to try and make it work.

"We tried. We didn't fail Phase II; Phase II failed America."

The AFL-CIO pointed out that 21 percent of the consumer price index items are not subject to any controls at all; that interest rates have never been controlled, nor fresh foods, nor the prices of land and homes, nor used cars, used furniture and other used goods that are bought primarily by low income Americans.

Beyond that, the AFL-CIO Executive Council noted that there is no effective machinery "to enforce whatever price and rent controls remain on the books."

On the eve of the critical 1972 elections, it is important that all workers understand why the AFL-CIO felt obligated to withdraw from the Pay Board. This step was taken because, as the AFL-CIO Executive Council announced in a statement adopted March 22, 1972:

"If the wage stabilization program is to be government-controlled, let it be so openly and clearly. Let the people who are exercising the power take the full responsibility for their decisions—without the facade of labor representation and the pretense of tripartitism . . .

"We will not be a part of the window-dressing for this system of unfair and inequitable government control of wages for the benefit of business profits."

The Council charged that the administration's new economic policy "is nothing more or less than a means of shifting to the average working man and his family the burden and the blame for the dismal failure of its former economic policy.

"It is an effort, at the expense of personal and institutional freedom in this country, to avoid the measures—resisted by big business and other selfish interests, such as constructive tax reform—most needed to correct the consequences of that failure. Having as we do a deep disbelief in and distrust of the aims and purposes of this administration's economic and social policies, we intend at the least to free representatives of the AFL-CIO from any grounds for the inference of complicity in the formulation or execution of those policies."

GEARING UP FOR THE 1972 CAMPAIGN

The California Labor Council on Political Education has long operated on the principle that the character, quality, and quantity of legislative accomplishments we achieve are directly related to the quality of the legislators we help elect.

We have also been aware that special interest groups, particularly those in the corporate community, have long been able to mobilize vast monetary resources to attempt to splinter or subvert our efforts to elect strong progressive candidates to key public offices.

Reports filed with the clerk of the U.S. House of Representatives disclosed following the 1970 off-year elections that some conservative candidates enjoyed a financial superiority ranging between 5 to 1 and 10 to 1 over more progressive candidates.

It was in recognition of this growing disparity that National COPE appealed for a doubling of the voluntary contribution to COPE from $1 to $2 per member last year. But many of the more active trade unionists who are acutely aware of campaign costs and the vast funds often easily accessible to reactionary candidates are now volunteering $5, $10 or more each.

Recognizing the importance of early organizational action to prepare for the 1972 election campaign, a special four-man California Labor COPE team initiated a tour of every county and district COPE in California early last year to encourage adoption of a four point political action program. It called for each COPE organization in California to set up:

1—A vehicle to maximize participation in labor's political efforts by members of minority groups. This aspect was augmented by the formation—with assistance from Norman Hill, assistant national director of the A. Philip Randolph Institute, and California Labor COPE minority section staffer Harry Jordan—of more than a dozen California chapters of the A. Philip Randolph Institute in key population centers in the state.

Plans are currently underway for the organization of LAPEC, a Latin American Political Education Committee, to be headed by State COPE vice president Ray Mendoza. California Labor COPE minority section staffer A. H. "Bill" Gallardo is helping in this effort.

2—A vehicle to encourage youth participation in labor's political effort, which is serviced wherever feasible by Frontlash, an AFL-CIO supported youth involvement organization that has succeeded in registering more than 90,000 voters in California in the past two years.

3—A local women's political organization designed to encourage participation by wives and daughters of trade union members.

4—A senior citizens' group to encourage maximum use of the talents of retired union members and other elderly citizens to help candidates who will help support national health insurance, improved social security benefits and other AFL-CIO-backed legislative goals.

As the nation's economic ills deepened, the need to maximize use of every possible resource has become increasingly evident.

To expand efforts to mobilize the women's vote and encourage women outside the trade union movement to participate actively in organized labor's political efforts, your secretary-treasurer last December established a Women's Activities Section within California Labor COPE and appointed Mary L. Yunt as director.

During the preceding two years Mrs. Yunt had served as director of the Orange County Committee on Political Education. Since her appointment, she has assisted local unions and central bodies throughout the state in setting up Women's Activities Sections within their COPE structure. Margaret Thornburg, Western Area Director of National COPE, has assisted in this effort.

In the senior citizens' field, a new organization comprised of retired AFL-CIO members has been established called "Concerned Seniors for Better Government." This organization is headed by Matthew De More, retired general secretary-treasurer of the AFL-CIO International Association of Machinists. De More is being assisted by Nelson Cruickshank, former director of the AFL-CIO's Social Security Department who is now president of the National Council of Senior Citizens.

While the basic structure and ground work for this vital expansion of California Labor COPE efforts in the ensuing campaigns has been accomplished, much more work remains to be done in vitalizing these units and welding them into an effective arm of local and district COPE operations. That's one of the jobs before us in the months immediately ahead.

A LOOK BACK AT THE 1970 ELECTIONS

With the 1970 decennial census already in progress and control of both houses of the state legislature as well as the Governor's office in conservative hands, California Labor COPE knew it had a vital job to do in the 1970 elections.

The conservative sweep vigorously sought by President Nixon could have destroyed the hopes of California workers for progress in key worker and consumer areas for more than a decade if the state's legislative districts were gerrymandered to serve reactionary candidates and the continued existence of many hard won laws protecting workers that were already on the books would have been seriously jeopardized.

But it didn't happen.

Despite the personal efforts of President Nixon to whip up a climate of fear through exploitation of the so-called "San Jose Incident," John V. Tunney, the COPE endorsed candidate, defeated incumbent Senator George Murphy — Nixon's choice — by more than 600,000 votes and five out of eight of California Labor COPE's candidates for statewide office were elected.

Moreover, by adopting a strategy of concentrating on marginal districts in which liberal candidates, given sufficient support, have a chance to unseat or defeat conservative opponents, California Labor COPE played a major role in helping liberal forces regain control of both houses of the state legislature.

The impact of the 1970 election victories, which included the election of COPE-endorsed Wilson Riles as State Superintendent of Public Instruction, the first black man to hold such a statewide post in the nation, were subsequently reflected in the results of the 1971 legislative session that saw nine labor bills signed into law, including the greatest improvements in the history of the state in the crucial social insurance field.

Maximum temporary disability benefits under the state's workmen's compensation program were hiked from $87.50 to $105 a week and permanent disability benefits were increased from $52.50 to $70 a week. The maximum weekly unemployment insurance benefit was boosted from $65 to $75. And the maximum benefit for off-the-job disabilities was raised from $87 to $105 a week.

All told, these advances mean that some 800,000 California workers will receive annually about $153 million more in benefits than in the past.

In pressing the campaign in behalf of Tunney, Riles and other statewide and legislative district offices in the 1970 general election, California Labor COPE organized a statewide task force which assisted local and district COPEs in a variety of ways and helped to speed the distribution of more than 3,500,000 pieces of campaign literature, including:

- More than 1.7 million California Labor COPE general election endorsement pamphlets which contained COPE's recommendations for statewide and district offices. These pamphlets were printed and distributed in 17 variations to accommodate major regions of the state and to facilitate identification of local district office endorsements by union members and their families.

- 500,000 Tunney flyers
- 250,000 4-page Tunney tabloids
- 500,000 Unruh tabloids
- 5,000 posters
- 1,000,000 slate cards

In addition, to give trade unionists an opportunity to review the actions of their Congressmen and state legislators, California Labor COPE also distributed more than 1,000 copies of the voting records of the national AFL-CIO and the California Labor Federation.

These educational efforts, augmented by a vigorous and well coordinated get-out-the-vote campaign, were generally credited with swamping President Nixon's pitch for a conservative sweep.

In hailing the election results as "a triumph by and for the people of California that justifies renewed faith by all in working within the system," your Secretary-Treasurer observed:

"Despite the enormous financial advantages enjoyed by some reactionary candidates, the state's voters in most instances saw through the scurrilous attempts to smear and malign labor-backed candidates.

"The election of Senator Tunney, Wilson Riles and progressive legislators to Congress, the State Senate and Assembly can be attributed largely to the diligence and dedication displayed by unionists and young people who pitched in and worked together to do the registration and get-out-the-vote job so essential to this victory."

He also noted that Senator Tunney's election gave California two democratic U.S. Senators for the first time since the Civil War.

Other COPE-endorsed statewide candidates elected in 1970 included Secretary of State Edmund G. Brown, Jr., (D), State Controller Houston I. Flournoy (R), and State Attorney General Evelle J. Younger (R).

On an overall basis, California Labor COPE endorsed 136 candidates in the 150 statewide, congressional, state legislative and state Board of Equalization seats at stake. Ninety COPE candidates won for an overall victory margin of 66 percent. In the gubernatorial race, Jess Unruh, the former Assembly Speaker who was the COPE-endorsed candidate, succeeded in slicing the predicted one million vote reelection margin of Governor Reagan nearly in half.

In Congress, California Labor COPE endorsed candidates in 36 districts and left two "open." COPE candidates won in 22 districts, a victory margin of 66 percent.

In the 20 even-numbered State Senate seats at stake, California Labor COPE endorsed 18 candidates in 17 districts including a dual endorsement in the 12th district in San Mateo County, and left three seats "open." COPE candidates won 11 of these seats for a victory margin of 61 percent.

In the Assembly, COPE endorsed 69 candidates in the 80 Assembly Districts, including a dual endorsement in the 31st Assembly District, and left 12 seats "open." COPE candidates won 48 of the 69 seats in which endorsements were made for a victory margin of 69 percent.

In the race for seats on the State Board of Equalization, all four COPE-endorsed candidates won election.

SPECIAL ELECTIONS

Since the November 1970 General Election three special elections for state legislative seats have been held with COPE-endorsed candidates winning two out of three. Two more special elections are pending.

In the 27th State Senatorial District in Los Angeles, Assemblyman David A. Roberti, the California Labor COPE candidate, polled 58 percent of the total vote cast in a special runoff election on July 20, 1971 to win the seat vacated by the election of George Danielson to Congress. Roberti's election boosted the Democratic Party's margin in the State Senate from 20-19 to 21-19.

In the 48th Assembly District, the seat vacated by Roberti's election to the State Senate, COPE endorsed Ralph Ochoa, an executive of the Urban Coalition, in the special primary election held October 19, 1971. Ochoa was defeated by Richard Alatorre, an administrative assistant to then Assembly Democratic Leader Walter Karabian.

Subsequently, California Labor COPE endorsed Alatorre but he was defeated in the November 16, 1971 runoff election by Republican Bill Brophy who had gained substantial name recognition in the district when he ran against Roberti for the 27th State Senate District seat.

Loss of this district, which includes 49,717 registered Democrats and 24,571 Republicans, was attributed to intra-party conflicts that resulted in a low voter turnout. Brophy won by a vote of 16,746 to 14,759. His victory reduced the Democrats' majority in the State Assembly from 43-37 to 42-38.

In the 76th Assembly District in San Diego, Bob Wilson, a 28-year-old La Mesa attorney, scored a stunning upset victory last month when he defeated Republican Jim Ashcraft by a vote of 24,899 to 23,041. The district had been held by Republicans ever since it was formed in 1961.

Wilson, the California Labor COPE-endorsed candidate, credited organized labor with playing a major role in his victory.

His election boosted the Democratic majority in the State Assembly back to 43-37.

The two special elections still pending are in the 36th State Senatorial District and the 49th Assembly District.

The vacancy in the 36th Senate District was created by the appointment of Senator Gordon Cologne to the 4th District Court of Appeals earlier this year. A special primary election has been set by Governor Reagan for May 9, 1972 with a runoff election, if necessary, to be held in conjunction with the June 6, 1972 primary election. Registration in the district, which encompasses Riverside and San Bernardino counties totals 202,488, including 101,397 Democrats and 97,437 Republicans.

The vacancy in the 49th Assembly District was created by the appointment of Assemblyman Peter Schabarum to the Los Angeles Board of Supervisors last month. The special primary election for this vacancy will also be held on May 9, 1972 with the runoff, if necessary, to be held in conjunction with the June 6, 1972 primary election. Registration in the 49th Assembly District, which is in Los Angeles County, totals 117,589, including 52,759 Democrats and 58,490 Republicans.

FEDERAL AND STATE ISSUES GUIDES

To assist county, district and regional or area COPE organizations in interviewing candidates seeking office in the 1972 elections within their jurisdictions, California Labor COPE developed and published separate issues guides for federal and state candidates which included a series of questions designed to provide some insight to each candidate's views on social and economic policy matters that directly affect the health and welfare of California workers.

These guides were distributed to all county and regional COPEs early last month.

OTHER SERVICES TO LOCAL COPEs

To assist local and district COPEs to keep up with changes in the election code and fluctuations in voter registrations in the various congressional, state senate and assembly districts in which they are involved, California Labor COPE has made a point of acquiring state publications such as the various reports on election results, voter registration and the election calendars and distributing these to COPE jurisdictions throughout the state.

It has, of course, also continued to service COPE requests for research and information and, as in the past, maintained a library of films available to COPE units throughout the state.

Just within the past few weeks, California Labor COPE has acquired two new films for use in the 1972 election campaigns, namely:

"COPE — Good Work for Democracy," a 16-millimeter color film that dramatically answers the question "What is COPE?" in about 16 minutes, and,

"Nixon: Broken Promises," a 16-millimeter color film that contrasts the campaign promises made by Nixon in 1968 with his actual performance on the job in terms of curbing inflation without increasing unemployment and related issues.

Copies of these two films are now available to all local COPEs and central bodies from California Labor COPE at 995 Market Street, 3rd Floor, San Francisco, California 94103.

Requests for the films should be made at least two weeks in advance and include at least one alternate showing date. There is no rental fee for the films but affiliates using them will be required to return the film to California Labor COPE within 24 hours after their scheduled showing date and will be required to pay the freight charge for returning the film via Greyhound to State COPE's San Francisco office.

In addition, within the next week or two, California Labor COPE will distribute copies of a four and a half minute film dealing with the presidential aspirations of Alabama Governor George Wallace to all county COPEs in the state. An additional 10 copies of this film will be available from the California Labor COPE film library.

AREA COPE PARLEY SET FOR APRIL 21

Just one week from today, a three-state regional COPE conference to discuss the 1972 election campaign and the vital issues it poses for U.S. workers will be held at the Mark Hopkins Hotel in San Francisco.

The meeting, to open at 9:30 a.m. Friday, April 21, 1972, will involve representatives from California, Arizona and Nevada. There is no limit on the number of delegates a local union or other affiliated organization may send.

The conference will feature addresses by Congressmen from the states represented and a new COPE film dealing with the first three years of the Nixon Administration.

Just last Friday, the impact of those three years was brought forcefully home again. The state's unemployment rate jumped from 5.8 to 6.2 percent, 40 percent higher than the 4.4 percent rate existing in March 1969. California's total unemployment of 579,000 last month was 44 percent higher than the 402,000 jobless in March of 1969.

In addition, despite the Nixon Administration's belated efforts last month to "jawbone" some of the nation's major retail food chains into easing prices, the overall wholesale price index also rose last month.

There are increasing signs that the Administration may in the months immediately ahead be forced by practical political expediencies to crack down on runaway profits and soaring prices and rents at least until after the November elections.

But any such action will already be too little and too late for the tens of thousands of California workers who have suffered severe financial reverses as a result of the national administration's predictably fruitless efforts to reduce inflation by programming two million more U.S. workers onto the unemployment rolls.

CONCLUSION

In conclusion, it is important for all of us as trade unionists to recognize that the political and economic philosophy of the occupant of the nation's White House has a pervasive influence on the lives of all U.S. workers, not only through the enormous executive powers of that office but through its appointive powers which have even longer effects on such institutions as the U.S. Supreme Court, the National Labor Relations Board and scores of other agencies vital to the economic, social and political security of the workers of our land.

We in the American labor movement have long been dedicated to change, to fighting within the democratic process to improve the economic status of the workers we represent and to protect their right as workers to have a voice in the conditions under which they work.

Today that right is under severe assault by reactionary forces that have demonstrated an easy access to the power structure of our nation.

That assault must be repulsed. And it will be so long as we each act with the unity and dedication that has made the American trade union movement one of the strongest forces for progress in the world today.

Fraternally submitted,

JOHN F. HENNING

Executive Secretary-Treasurer
