Abstract

The San Francisco Museum of Modern Art's Office of the Director Records contain administrative records from the museum generated primarily between 1974 and 1986, corresponding with the tenure of its fourth director, Henry T. Hopkins. During this time the museum created the Departments of Photography (1980) and Architecture and Design (1983), and established the Elise Stern Haas Curatorial Chair (1983). The museum also changed its name to San Francisco Museum of Modern Art and celebrated its 50th anniversary. These records document all aspects of the museum's administration, including financial management and fund-raising activities, incoming and outgoing correspondence, educational programs, involvement with other professional museum organizations, and the director's activities and relationships with artists and other museum directors.

Language

Records are primarily in English.

Administrative History

Henry T. Hopkins (1928–2009) was the director of the San Francisco Museum of Modern Art (SFMOMA) from 1974 to 1986. His start date was January 4, 1974. Prior to his arrival, the museum was without a director for over a year, and was being managed by Deputy Director Michael McCone.

Hopkins became the museum's fourth director. He had been the director of the Fort Worth Art Center (now the Modern Art Museum of Fort Worth) from 1968 to 1974. Prior to this, from 1961 to 1968, he held numerous curatorial and administrative positions at the Los Angeles County Museum of Art (LACMA). He is credited with establishing LACMA's education department and docent program.

Hopkins presided over significant episodes in SFMOMA's growth, including the gift of 28 paintings by Clyfford Still, in 1975; the establishment of its Department of Photography, in 1980; the establishment of its Department of Architecture and Design (the first in a West Coast museum), in 1983; and the establishment of the Elise Stern Haas Curatorial Chair, also in 1983.

In 1975 the museum formally changed its name to San Francisco Museum of Modern Art to better reflect the identity and mission established during its earliest years.

In 1985 Hopkins oversaw the celebration of the museum's 50th anniversary.

Staffing changes during his tenure include the following: Van Deren Coke was hired as the first curator of photography in 1979; George Neubert, the associate director for art, left to become the director of the Sheldon Memorial Art Gallery (now the Sheldon Museum of Art) at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln in 1983; T. William Melis was hired as deputy director in 1984; and Graham Beal was appointed to the position of chief curator in 1984.

After resigning from SFMOMA, in 1986, Hopkins returned to Los Angeles to direct the Frederick R. Weisman Art Foundation from 1986 to 1991. He was the first director of that foundation. In 1991 he was made chair of the Department of Art at the University of California, Los Angeles (UCLA). He was instrumental in the negotiations that gave UCLA management responsibility over the Armand Hammer Museum of Art, and was the museum's director from 1994 to 1998.

Henry T. Hopkins passed away in October 2009.

Arrangement Note

The records are generally divided by calendar year. They are generally organized alphabetically but are not always consistent in their order within each year. Original folder citations have been maintained.

In some instances there are files with former SFMOMA director Gerald Nordland's file numbering system, and some records span several years. The last two years of Hopkins's records, 1985 and 1986, were found without folders and in no particular order. They were organized and placed in folders according to the arrangement used for the previous years.

Processing Note

The records are fully processed. Preservation treatments have been applied. Paper clips, staples, and other metal fasteners have been removed. Fragile papers and newspaper clippings have been interleaved for protection with acid-free bond paper. Photographs are sleeved in Mylar and left in their original folder locations. An inventory of the photographs is available in this finding aid.

The records are housed in letter-size folders. Some oversize records are housed in flat oversize boxes.

Scope and Content Note

The Office of the Director Records, 1974–1986 collection consists primarily of correspondence to and from Henry T. Hopkins; records relating to all aspects of museum operations, including acquisitions, exhibitions, educational programs, facilities, publicity, events, fund-raising, policies, personnel, and Trustee matters; and other records relating to Hopkins's personal and professional activities, created during his tenure.

The records date from Hopkins's tenure, with file contents overlapping his directorial transition. The actual date range of records in the collection is 1973 to 1986. Summaries of select years are included below, highlighting some of the materials of interest and relevant events.

During Hopkins's tenure, Artists' Soapbox Derbies (1975 and 1978) were organized as a means of raising funds for the museum. Bay Area artists were invited to design and race their own soapbox derby cars, as well as design trophies for the winners. The event included artists such as Robert Arneson, Ruth Asawa, David Best, Viola Frey, Lynn Hershman, and Fletcher Benton. Among the winners were Ant Farm, for Most Imaginative, and Lucian Pompili, for Most Impractical. The planning for this activity is chronicled in the form of correspondence with artists, sponsors, and the city's Park and Recreation Department; preparatory materials; and copies of the event program.

The museum received, as a gift, 28 works of art from and by the artist Clyfford Still.

In 1978 the State of California saw the passage of Proposition 13. Also known as the Jarvis-Gann Amendment, the proposition decreased property taxes by assessing property values at their 1975 value, and restricted annual increases of the assessed value of real estate. SFMOMA was a member of a coalition that brought disparate organizations together—from the Bank of America to the Automotive Machinists Union—to oppose the proposition. The passage of Proposition 13 reduced SFMOMA's budget, forcing the museum to cancel 50 percent of its program that year. The city's Hotel Tax Fund, usually allocated to cultural activities, was subverted to general fund use. The records related to Proposition 13 include reports from the California Chamber of Commerce, the Office of the Mayor, and the Board of Supervisors; correspondence; and press releases, press clippings, and other materials related to the No on Proposition 13 Committee.

The second and last Artists' Soapbox Derby was held in 1978 with many of the same artists that participated in the first one.

The museum ended its film program due to mounting costs.

Judy Chicago's The Dinner Party (1979) received its first public presentation in a museum setting at SFMOMA.

Hopkins kicked off what he described as a "Decade of Development," with advancing the permanent collection as a first priority, and funding new museum space as a second priority. His ultimate goal was to establish SFMOMA as the most important museum of modern art in the Western United States. The preparation for this effort is chronicled in a long-range planning report.

The museum organized a touring Philip Guston retrospective. It was the artist's last exhibition during his lifetime.

In 1983 SFMOMA became the first West Coast museum to establish a Department of Architecture and Design.

Hopkins gave the commencement address at the California College of Arts and Crafts' 77th annual commencement exercises, in April 1984. A copy of the commencement address exists in the files.

The museum sponsored the Clos Pegase Winery Competition in 1984. The winners, architect Michael Graves and artist Edward Schmidt, were selected to design Clos Pegase, a winery, sculpture garden, and residence for the art collectors Jan and Mitsuko Shrem. An exhibition of the submissions, entitled art + architecture + landscape, was organized in 1985 as the second phase of this project. The competition and exhibition represent the first major project for the new Department of Architecture and Design, and featured models and drawings by finalist teams including Robert Mangurian and James Turrell; and Daniel Solomon, Ricardo Bofill, Patrick Dillon, Barbara Stauffacher Solomon, and Ed Carpenter. The competition is documented in the Domaine Clos Pegase Design Competition report of the jury and press release.

The creation of more gallery space for the museum, which was located in the War Memorial Veterans Building in the 1970s, and plans to expand into the Herbst Theatre created tension between the museum and veterans' groups, who felt that the museum was encroaching on their space. The situation came to a head in 1985, when the United Veterans Council threatened to evict the museum. Ultimately the War Memorial Veterans Committee voted to allow the museum to stay. The expansion and related controversy are documented in Board of Trustees Building Committee files, correspondence, memos, and news clippings.

The year 1985 also marked SFMOMA's 50th anniversary. The museum threw itself a birthday party and opened its doors to the public free of charge on October 5, 1985, though the actual anniversary dates to January 18. The day included jugglers, mimes, musicians, art-making opportunities, and a performance of Verdi's opera Falstaff, and culminated in the presentation of a cake large enough to feed more than 2,000 people. The planning for this activity is chronicled in the form of correspondence, budgets, press releases, and 50th anniversary committee agenda minutes.

Hopkins resigned from SFMOMA in 1986.

Selected timeline of events

1972

Gerald Nordland resigns from post as museum director.

1973

Mel Novikoff is appointed the new director of the museum's film program, replacing Edith Kramer.

Rolando Castellón is appointed program director of the Museum Intercommunity eXchange (MIX). MIX was a two-year-old grant-sponsored program to make SFMOMA more interesting to a diverse audience.

1974

Henry T. Hopkins arrives from the Fort Worth Art Museum (now the Modern Art Museum of Fort Worth) to take over as director.

The museum organizes the first major retrospective of the artworks of Roy De Forest.

Five Bay Area artists are selected as recipients of Society for the Encouragement of Contemporary Art (SECA) grants for 1974: Charles Garoian, Jerome Johnson, David Jones, Bryan Rogers, and Mary Snowden. The annual SECA Grant grows from one to five recipients thanks to a gift from the Charles E. Merrill Trust.

1975

Artist Clyfford Still gives 28 paintings to the museum.

The museum stages the Artists' Soapbox Derby, in which 75 artist-designed cars race downhill in San Francisco's McLaren Park. A second version of the event is held in 1978.

The Women's Board disbands and reforms as the Modern Art Council (MAC).

1976

"Modern" is added to the museum's name to more accurately reflect its purview.

1978

The second and final Artists' Soapbox Derby is held.

The Rental Gallery opens at Fort Mason Center to support local artists through its exhibition, rental, and sales programs.

The auxiliary Collectors Forum is established. Its purpose is to cultivate and educate Bay Area art collectors.

In response to the passage of California Proposition 13 (the "People's Initiative to Limit Property Taxation") and the resulting loss of revenue, the museum begins charging an admission fee.

1979

Judy Chicago's The Dinner Party (1979) receives its first public presentation in a museum setting at SFMOMA.

Space/Time/Sound—1970s: A Decade in the Bay Area opens in December. Curated by Suzanne Foley, the exhibition is a comprehensive survey of 1970s Bay Area conceptual and performance art practices.

The Research/Collections Department is created. Its purpose is to better document the museum's permanent collection. Its efforts would crystallize in a National Endowment for the Arts-funded six-year project to inventory and document the permanent collection. The project culminated in the publication of a permanent collection catalogue in January 1985, coinciding with the museum's 50th anniversary.

1980

The Department of Photography is established.

1981

John Humphrey, the museum's first curator, passes away. Appointed in 1955, his early focus was on contemporary painting and sculpture. By the end of the 1960s his focus had shifted to photography, and by the 1970s the permanent collection of photography was flourishing under his direction.

1983

Associate Director George Neubert leaves to assume the position of director at the Sheldon Memorial Art Gallery (now the Sheldon Museum of Art) at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

The Department of Architecture and Design is established, the first of its kind on the West Coast.

1985

The museum celebrates its 50th anniversary.

1986

Hopkins resigns from SFMOMA. He returns to Los Angeles to direct the Frederick R. Weisman Art Foundation.

2009

Henry T. Hopkins passes away on September 27, 2009.
