Scope and Contents

The artificial collection consists of over 7,500 photographic prints of prominent people in San Francisco and California's history from the 1890s – 2010s collected by the San Francisco History Center, San Francisco Public Library. The photographs are of a diverse group of politicians, artists, business people, entertainers, literary figures, community leaders, labor leaders and others primarily from the late nineteenth-century until the 1980s. Politicians and elected officials include many of San Francisco's mayors and Supervisors and California's early governors, senators, and congressmen. California's wealthy and powerful families represented include the de Youngs, the Hearsts, and the Spreckels. The collection does include persons of national prominence.

The collection contains the work of many photographers, including Moulin Studios, Stewart & Skelton Studios, Hartsook, and others including San Francisco News and Call Bulletin staff photographers. Most prints are original but there are many copy prints including a series of photo prints by Hosea Blair. Many photographs do not have the photographer or photography studio identified and are undated.

The photographs are mostly traditional portrait photography, but some photographs are group shots or photographs of the individual. There are some vernacular photographs and a small number of drawings.
