Biographical Note:

Daniel X. Freedman, psychiatrist and psychopharmacologist, was born August 17, 1921, in Lafayette and grew up in Crawfordsville, Indiana. He entered Harvard University in 1939 but left in 1942 to enlist in the U.S. Army infantry. Following a back injury which forced him out of combat service, he volunteered to be one of the first of the military's clinical psychologists; he administered Rorschach and neuropsychological tests, and conducted sodium amytal interviews and aphasia retraining programs for brain-damaged veterans. Freedman returned to Harvard to finish a thesis for Talcott Parsons on "Clinical psychology as an emergent profession," and received his B.A. in 1947. He married Mary C. Nadeigh in 1945. In 1951 he received an M.D. from Yale University, where he conducted research on the actions of Benadryl on motion sickness, investigated brain mechanisms of anaphylaxis and allergy, and served as chief resident in Psychiatry. As recipient of one of the first Career Investigator Awards, Freedman spent a year (1957-1958) studying the effect of LSD (lysergic acid diethylamide) on brain amines and behavior, in Seymour Kety's laboratory at the National Institute of Mental Health.

Freedman returned to Yale University to join the faculty as Assistant Professor in the Department of Psychiatry (1958-1961), then Associate Professor (1961-1964) and finally Professor (1964-1966); he concomitantly received training at the Western New England Institute for Psychoanalysis. His research explored the fundamental biological mechanisms underlying the effects of psychedelic substances, including the first direct linkage of LSD with brain serotonin (5HT) and norepinephrine. With students and colleagues, he discovered the role of similar neurochemical processes in the brain during environmental stress, and elevated serotonin (hyperserotonemia) in childhood autism. His psychopharmacology laboratory, and the departmental training programs he directed, stimulated many who became leading psychiatric investigators. In 1966, Freedman collaborated with Fredrick C. (Fritz) Redlich to publish what would become a standard textbook, The Theory and Practice of Psychiatry.

Freedman moved to the University of Chicago in 1966 as professor and Chair of the Department of Psychiatry; he became Louis Block Professor of Biological Sciences in 1969. He assumed chief editorship of the American Medical Association's Archives of General Psychiatry in 1970 and quickly built it into perhaps the most important journal in psychiatry and one of the most widely cited and respected journals in all of science. He served as president of several professional societies during this period and later, including the American Association of Chairmen of Departments of Psychiatry (1972-1973), the Association of Research in Nervous and Mental Disease (1974), and the American Psychiatric Association (APA) (1981-1982), and the Society of Biological Psychiatry (1985-1986).

In 1983, Freedman moved to the University of California, Los Angeles, as the first Judson Braun Professor of Psychiatry and Pharmacology, focusing his research efforts on elucidating 5HT-2 receptor downregulation with LSD tolerance. From 1989-1991 he was Acting Chairman of the Department of Biobehavioral Sciences and Acting Director of the UCLA Neuropsychiatric Institute.

Freedman was widely known for vigorous promotion of both the science and rational clinical practice of modern psychiatry. As a sought-after advisor or consultant to government and religious policy makers, as well as influential members of the public and pharmaceutical industry, he chaired or served on numerous federal committees and private sector organizations dealing with science and policy regarding pharmacology, drug abuse, and mental health. In 1973 Freedman was courted to head the new Alcohol, Drug Abuse, and Mental Health Administration (ADAMHA) as President Nixon's "drug czar." He withdrew his name from consideration but continued to extol the importance of shifting research priorities to the major mental illnesses, such as when he testified before Congress in 1981 to urge restoration of targeted cuts in mental health research funding. His long history of service includes being advisor to the President's Biomedical Research Panel (1975-1976), coordinator of the Research Task Panel of President Carter's Commission on Mental Health (1977-1978), and member of the Joint Commission on Prescription Drug Use (1977-1980).

A member of the Institute of Medicine and Fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, Freedman received numerous awards, including the Award for Distinguished Achievement in Modern Medicine (1973); the William C. Menninger Memorial Award of the American College of Physicians (1975) in recognition of distinguished contributions to the science of mental health; the APA's Seymour D. Vestermark Award (1981) for his role in educating many leaders in psychiatric research; the APA's Distinguished Service Award for his contributions to American psychiatric research, health policy and education; the New York Academy of Medicine's Salmon Medal (1990); and the first International Sarnat Award for Psychiatry (1992).

Daniel X. Freedman died on June 3, 1993, in Los Angeles.

An oral history interview with Freedman, Psychiatry and Pharmacology, is available in the Department of Special Collections, Charles E. Young Research Library, UCLA (Call number: 300 / 444).

Scope and Content:

The papers of Daniel X. Freedman span the years 1921-1993. Included are correspondence (the margins of many letters bear Freedman's annotations, and photocopies of his responses are typically filed alongside the letters he received); class syllabi, lectures, and notes; grant applications; laboratory notebooks and data; manuscripts and typescripts of publications, lectures, speeches, and interviews; publications; notes of committee meetings and draft reports; patient case notes and correspondence; newspaper and magazine clippings; awards; photographs; and audiotapes. The collection documents Freedman's career as a biological and clinical psychiatrist, researcher, teacher, mentor, administrator, editor, and public policy consultant. The few identifiable lacunae in this collection include primary documentation of Freedman's childhood.

Significant correspondents include George K. Aghajanian, Boris M. Astrachan, Jack D. Barchas, Floyd E. Bloom, Malcolm B. Bowers, Thomas E. Bryant, Rosalynn Carter, Donald J. Cohen, Jay B. Cutler, Beatrice Schenk De Regniers (Freedman's older sister), Nicholas Giarman, Frederick K. Goodwin, Roy R. Grinker, Philip S. Holzman, Jennifer Jones Simon, Seymour S. Kety, Donald F. Klein, Gerald L. Klerman, Nathan S. Kline, Art Linkletter, Karl Menninger, Stephen Pachl, Herbert Pardes, Talcott Parsons, Fredrick C. (Fritz) Redlich, Melvin Sabshin, Arthur M. Sackler, Kenneth I. Shine, Solomon H. Snyder, Michael R. Sonnenreich, Stephen M. Stahl, Senator Ted Stevens, Judith P. Swazey, Gary L. Tischler, and Louis Jolyon (Jolly) West.

Organization and Arrangement:

Most of the collection was in good order when it was accessioned; early papers—before Freedman's appointment at Yale University—were in poor order and thus organized by the archivist. Folder titles were transcribed from the original folders, with bracketed explanatory notes added as needed.

The papers were arranged by the archivist into the following series and subseries (date ranges of materials in the collection are enclosed in parentheses):

1. Family (1940-1993)
 - 1.1 Parents (1940-1980; chronological arrangement)
 - 1.2 Sister (1975-1980; chronological)
 - 1.3 Aunt (1980-1993; chronological)
 - 1.4 Wife (1970-1992; chronological)
2. Autobiographical material (1952-1993)
 - 2.1 Autobiographical material (1952-1993; chronological)
 - 2.2 Portraits (1983-1993; chronological)
3. Biographical material (1936-1993)
 - 3.1 Media (1936-1991; chronological)
 - 3.2 Interviews and oral histories (1989-1993; chronological)

- 3.3 Introductions, toasts and tributes (1971-1992; chronological)
 - 3.4 Reunions (1981-1993; chronological)
 - 3.5 Obituaries and memorials (1993)
- 4. Finances (1965-1993)
 - 4.1 Ledgers (1979-1992; chronological)
 - 4.2 Travel (1967-1993; chronological)
 - 4.3 Royalties (1992-1993; chronological)
 - 4.4 Disclosure statements (1965-1992; chronological)
 - 4.5 Income and benefits (1992-1993; chronological)

Source of Acquisition / Provenance:

Following Freedman's sudden death, his papers were deeded to the Neuroscience History Archives of UCLA's Brain Research Institute on 18 March 1994 by Mary C.N. Freedman. The Neuroscience History Archives underwrote processing costs—including materials and an archivist's salary—for this collection during the period 1995-1998. At the conclusion of processing, ownership of the collection was transferred to the UCLA Department of Special Collections.
