The papers document the career of Gordon Tullock, an economist known for his work on the theories of public choice and rent seeking. The collection includes writings, correspondence, studies, reports, and printed matter related to public choice, decision-making theory, political and economic theory, and legal procedure. The materials are divided into three groups based on date of acquisition by the Hoover Institution Archives. Although the collection has not been arranged, the index to major groups can serve as a guide to the collection.

The Biographical file includes family correspondence, photographs, awards, and resumes.

Tullock corresponded with many well known economists and political figures, such as Yale Brozen, Karl Brunner, William F. Buckley, Jr., Ronald Coase, Milton Friedman, Gottfried Haberler, F. A. Harper, F.A. von Hayek, Ludwig von Mises, Karl R. Popper, Murray Rothbard, George Stigler, and Kenneth S. Templeton. The Correspondence includes Tullock's letters to and from economists and other scholars.

Tullock was a professor at several universities, including the University of Virginia, George Mason University, the Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University, and the University of Arizona. In addition to his work as an educator, Tullock was a prolific writer. The Speeches and writings contain drafts, research files, correspondence, notes, and printed copies related to Tullock's many books and articles. Further drafts of speeches, as well as meeting materials of the Mont Pelerin Society, can be found in the Conference and travel file.

With James Buchanan, Tullock found the economics journal Public Choice in 1966, when it was originally named Papers in Non-Market Economics. Tullock was the editor of Public Choice for many years. The Public Choice file includes papers submitted to the journal, subscriptions, orders, correspondence, meeting agendas, and sales information.

The collection contains Writings by others in the form of drafts and printed matter.
